Full-time attorney?

Weighted down with complex legal issues, the Carmel City Council is ready to debate hiring a full-time city attorney. Presently, a private attorney is employed parttime. The issue comes up Monday night. Page 2.

'Large houses,' large problem

In a rare weekend session, the Carmel Planning Commission plans to tour neighborhoods where so-called "large houses" are proposed for construction. A dozen proposals are on the table and the commission intends to make determinations by mid-day on Saturday. Page 3.

Sewage and Marriott

If developers of the proposed Marriott Lodge in Carmel Valley don't get specific about treating wastewater, County Health Officer Walter Wong says they should be denied a use permit. Meanwhile, opponents of the 376-room resort lodge have more than 1,600 signatures on a petition against the development. Page 4.

Sculpt tree

Dear Editor:

The Carmel City Council should commission a local artist to sculpt that tree stump on Dolores Street into a work of art. It would bring publicity to Carmel and attract more tourists to the town.

Bill of rights

Dear Editor:

May I submit the following "Bill of Rights" on behalf of the elderly who reside in institutions of one kind or another, run by public or private agencies and individuals:

- 1) The right to have a private room, a small apartment if a married couple.
- 2) The right to be served truly nutritious food and drink, not junk food, such as refined starches, chemically laden and sugary products and drinks. Fresh fruits and vegetables, especially, and sufficient good protein foods are needed.
- 3) The right to have a few prized possessions in one's private quarters.

4) The right to get daily exercise to improve circulation, agility, strength, firm up muscles, help one move about.

5) The right to get out into the fresh air and sunshine, enjoy attractive surroundings of nature's beauty.

6) The right to transportation, to go visiting, shopping, recreation, etc.

7) The right to have peace and quiet. An institution's television set should be in a separate room, not in the social room where residents gather to converse, or read or just relax.

8) The right to write and mail out letters and to have visitors at reasonable times.

9) The right to get prompt expert attention — medical or nonmedical health practitioners.

10) The right to good ventilation, comfortable temperature and avoidance of chilling drafts.

11) The right to adequate toilet facilities and convenient, especially for use at night.

12) The right to at least a monthly meeting of residents to discuss concerns.

13) The right of individuals and group to offer suggestions to management.

14) The right to pleasing (not too loud) entertainment and to be permitted to entertain if one has a desire to do so — recite, sing, tell a joke, etc.

15) The right to sympathetic and kindly consideration by director and staff.

16) The right to be free of worry about the cost of their maintenance and to be provided with a monthly sum, to not be without some funds. The wealthiest country on earth should be able to provide such security.

17) The right to let an appropriate government agency know if serious problems exist in the institution and suggestions go unheeded.

18) The right to be moved out of the institution if one prefers living elsewhere and can manage as well or better.

Full-time attorney tops next council agenda

THE CARMEL City Council will consider whether Carmel should have a full-time city attorney at its regular meeting next Monday night.

"The more actions we take, the more complex things become," Mayor Gunnar Norberg said Tuesday. He supports hiring a full-time city attorney and requested the agenda item. Councilman Howard Brunn also requested the item last week in a memorandum to the City Council.

Carmel has never had a full-time city attorney. City Attorney George W. Brehmer has served on a part-time basis since May 1973. He is a partner in the Carmel law firm of Walker, Schroeder, Davis and Brehmer. "The city is my primary client, but on a part-time basis," Brehmer explained.

Brehmer said he wants to "wait and see" how the new City Council functions before advising the lawmakers about whether to hire a full-time attorney. He did not rule himself out as a prospect.

The city attorney is required to attend all City Council, Planning Commission and Business License Review Board meetings. Brehmer estimated that he spends over 700 hours a year on city-related matters. His salary is $18,000 but the legal department budget is $37,493.

"Different zoning and planning matters we are involved with could require the attention of a full-time attorney," Norberg said.

THE CITY COUNCIL also will consider its use of the present committee system. The three City Council committees performed administrative duties now handled by City Administrator Jack Collins. At the March 14 City Council meeting, Collins suggested the elimination of the committee system.

The Committee on Administration deals with administrative and personnel matters. Its members are Norberg and Councilman Mike Brown. The Committee on Lands and Improvements checks acquisition and disposal of municipal property. Councilman David Hughes is the sole member of that committee following Bernard Anderson's retirement from the City Council.

The Committee on Public Welfare investigates matters of public health, safety and welfare. Councilmen Helen Arnold and Brown are on that committee.

Most items formally referred to these committees are now directed to the city administrator.

The lawmakers also will consider a proposal to lease the city-owned Flanders mansion to Collins. Under the proposal, the city administrator would move in with his family this summer at $400 a month in rent. The house would be opened for municipally sponsored events four times a year.

The Carmel Planning Commission has recommended that a city employee occupy the mansion, although it did not specify the city administrator as tenant.

The City Council also will consider if the new R-4 (residential with limited commercial) zone should be applied to areas other than those now zoned commercial.

When the Planning Commission considered the question March 15, it concluded that commercial uses should not be allowed to expand into the R-1 residential zone. It recommended retention of the statement in the General Plan that says, "The zone is proposed to replace lands now zoned commercial."

That statement will not absolutely guarantee that property zoned R-1 will not be zoned R-4 upon request of the owner," City Attorney Brehmer said March 15 in a memorandum to Planning Director Robert Griggs.

With the 1978-79 city budget process already underway, each City Council member is scheduled to name a delegate to serve as a member on the citizens' advisory budget committee.

The committee will work on an advisory basis with the City Council, but will not vote on budget items.

Pine knots

Government by stealth

By AL EISNER

IT LOOKS like Carmel might be heading for a stormy two-year period. Judging by past performance, it appears that the City Council, under the leadership of Mayor Gunnar Norberg, intends to legislate without bothering to consult the people affected by its actions.

This was apparent in the preceding two-year period when the council attempted to adopt an ill-conceived law that would limit the number of restaurants in the city and another that would eliminate deliveries by trucks in the business district.

Only after the foolishness and the futility of their proposed actions were made plain by outraged cries from the persons that would be directly affected, did the councilmen wisely back off from their positions on the two issues.

There were other similar proposals that were discussed by the council. Some were adopted, some were dropped after the city attorney pointed out that they might be overstepping their constitutional bounds.

The latest display of arrogance by our city officials, however, brought down the wrath of several residents. It also left a lot of red faces among members of the Planning Commission. Here's what happened:

At its March 13 meeting, the three members of the Norberg Majority on the City Council attempted to adopt an emergency ordinance that would establish a moratorium on all residential construction in the city. The matter was not on the published agenda and was brought up in the wee hours when most of the audience had gone home (fortunately, our stoic Pine Cone reporter was on the job).

Since such emergency ordinances require four affirmative votes, and Councilmen Bernard Anderson and David Hughes refused to go along with it, an alternate measure was adopted. This requires that the building inspector screen all applications for building permits in the residential district. He was instructed to refer all applications for "large" houses to the Planning Commission for review and approval.

By the end of last week, 13 applications for building permits were held up by the building inspector. The Planning Commission was not scheduled to meet for another couple of weeks. At least one applicant, however, became enraged at what he considered to be undue delay and retained an attorney. The commission hastily scheduled a meeting for last Monday, but did so without the usual published notice. Even though such notice is not legally necessary, there are some people who think the public should have been given ample notice so that it could have taken part in the proceedings.

THE MONDAY night session took on the appearance of a comic opera. Confused, harassed and overworked, the commissioners gamely tried to follow the hazy mandate of the City Council. They finally adjourned the meeting until Saturday when they will tour the sites and reconvene in the council chambers to act on the pending applications.

One application, however, was given unanimous approval. That was the one sought by the frustrated resident who took the time and undertook the expense of retaining an attorney.

When the building inspector and the confused commissioners attempted to read the plans and make judgments about the proposed building projects, none of the other affected property owners or their representatives were present. Except for two haggard Pine Cone staffers, none of the other media were present. If your local newspaper were not present, the proceedings might have been conducted in the cozy, private council chambers without the public's knowledge. It's our hope that interested persons will read this and attend the meeting this weekend.

THERE WAS A rumor floating around earlier this week that a member of the council would introduce an ordinance that would halt all commercial and residential construction in the city. It's not on the agenda, but it can be introduced as an emergency measure and adopted with four "yes" votes.

Previous furtive actions by the council have led to a feeling of suspicion and mistrust. Unless the council starts to act in a more responsible manner, property owners and others with an interest in city affairs will have to retain attorneys or others to monitor meetings and represent their interests should something arise suddenly and without warning.

We would then have a permanent state of confrontation that would be counter-productive. Is this what the residents of Carmel want?

Mixed reaction to coast plan

A FORMER Carmel mayor called it "mish mash." The city administrator called it "killing two birds with one stone." The man who wrote it admitted it may be a "scattergun" approach.

Whatever you call it, the Carmel City Council will eye the first draft of Carmel's Local Coastal Work Program and General Plan on Monday, April 10. While most of those who would be affected stayed home Tuesday evening, about 30 current and former city officials attended the first of many public hearings on the program at City Hall.

The audience picked away at the 41-page draft completed March 13 by private consultant Gregory L. Cory of San Francisco. Some reacted with disfavor to state mandates for the program. There was general concern about combining the Local Coastal Work Program and the General Plan into a single document.

Rugbers lost their shirts

Eighteen rugby players literally lost their shirts in Carmel over the weekend.

Part-time city employee Don Allen hauled a green canvass sack loaded with the soiled green and white jerseys into the Carmel Police Department on Monday morning. He found the sack while clearing litter at the Carmel Beach.

Nobody knows who owns them.

The 20th annual Monterey National Rugby Tournament was played at Pebble Beach on Saturday and Sunday, but none of the 32 competing teams have claimed the lost property, according to police.

The jerseys will be stored in the department's property locker.

"I think that somehow clumsies up the whole thing," said Gene Hammond, a former Carmel mayor.

The California Coastal Act, passed as Prop. 20 in 1972, requires the 53 cities and 15 counties along the coast to prepare programs that assure public access to coastal lands. The programs must be approved by regional and state coastal commissions by 1980, the date when state jurisdiction over the coastline is to be returned to municipal and county governments.

ALTHOUGH a local budget for the program has not been established, the costs of the program that directly answer coastal act goals could be underwritten by up to $30,000 in state funds, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs.

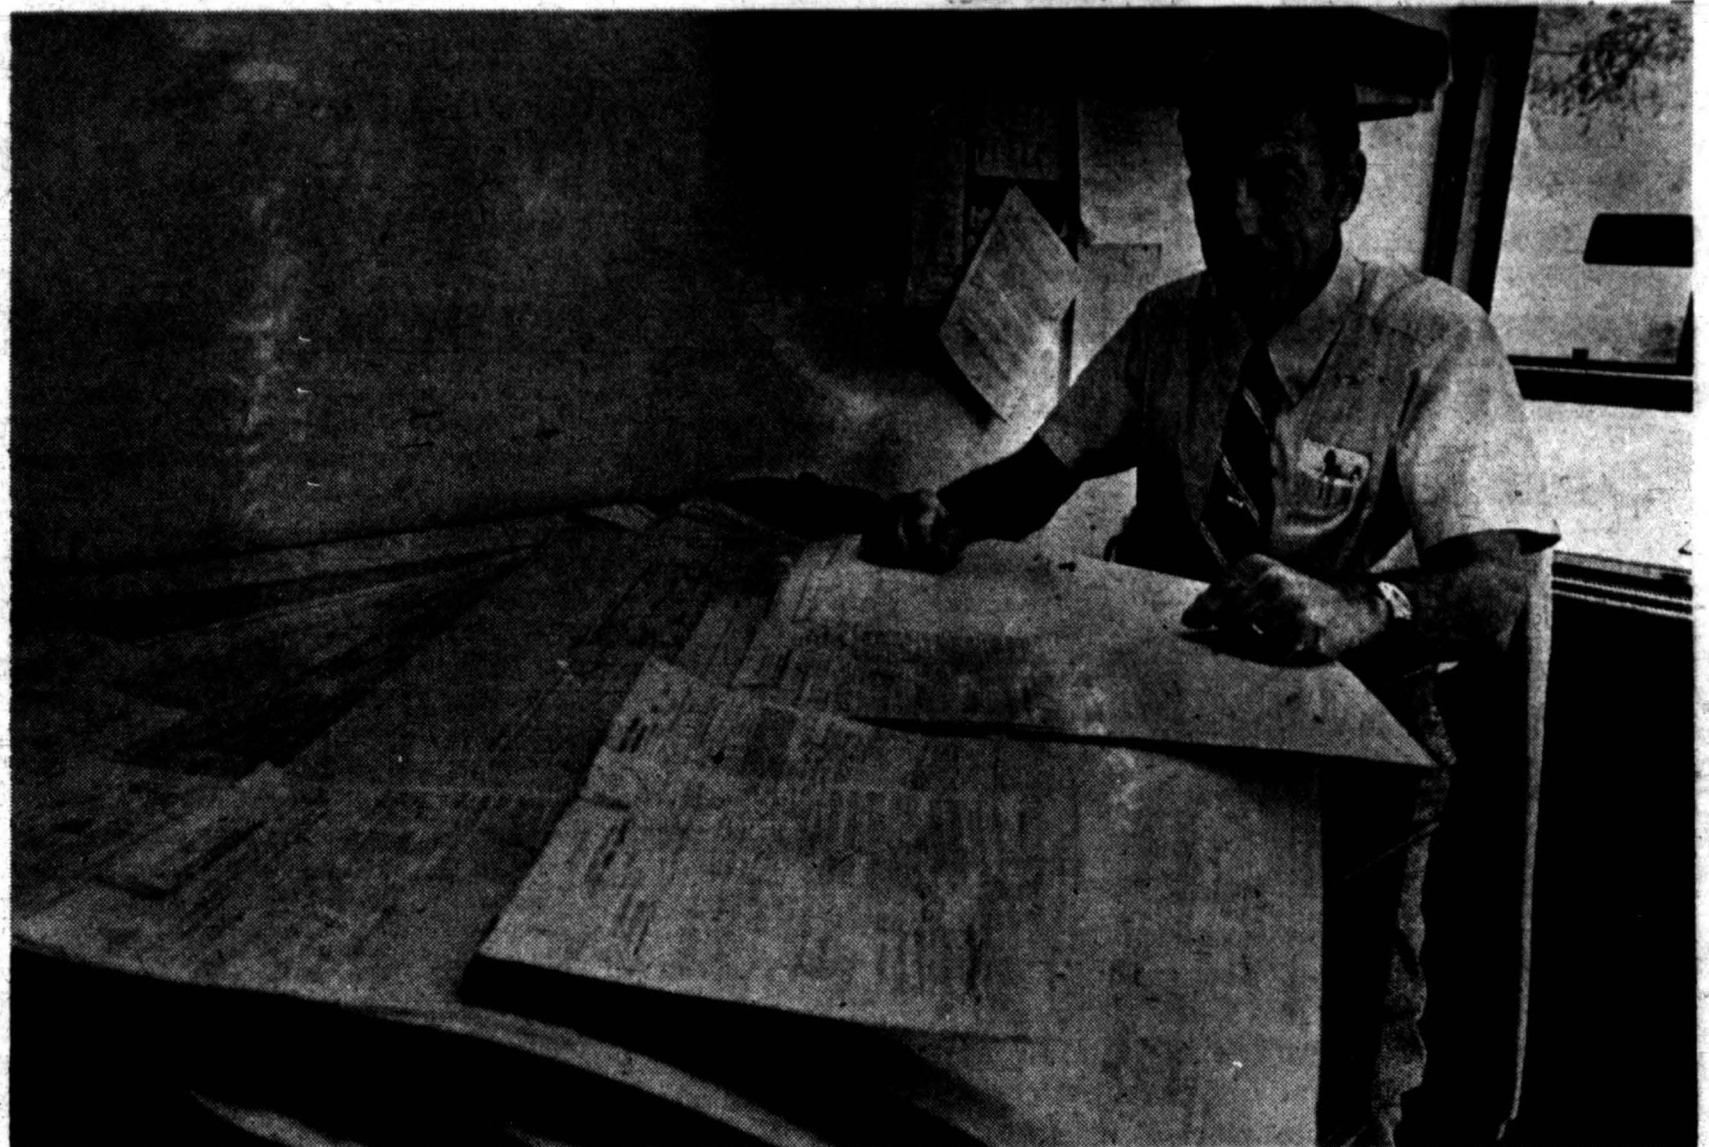

Griggs favors combining the Local Coastal Work Program and General Plan into a single document. He claims it will save money and time. "If you think the General Plan we have now is good, you're wrong. I helped write it and it's done backwards," he said.

The draft program concentrates on three primary areas: the city, the beach front and the "sphere of influence" that surrounds the city for three miles.

"You are asking for trouble with the county if you overlap with them," warned Dr. Francis Herrick, who voiced disapproval over sphere of influence planning in the program.

"I detect items in this document in which the Coastal Commission has no interest. I believe the sphere of influence muddies the water," added Hammond.

Hammond charged that the document was written "in an entirely wrong approach." He suggested the program be developed around Carmel's "good, valuable and worthwhile things."

A BAKER'S DOZEN of pending applications for home remodeling for second stories or "large houses" awaits action from the Carmel Planning Commission. Fred Cunningham, the chief city building inspector, pulled the 13 requests after the commission decided earlier in March to examine plans for "large houses" on a case-by-case basis. In an attempt to speed the process, the commission plans to tour each location on Saturday and convene a special session afterward at City Hall. (Michael Stang photo)

'Large house' logjam

Rare weekend meeting for beleaguered planners

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CONFRONTED BY A RAFT of paperwork, the Carmel Planning Commission will convene a rare weekend meeting Saturday to keep pace with applications to build so-called "large houses" in Carmel.

Acting on March 13, the Carmel City Council passed a policy statement which empowered the commission to determine if any proposed new home would be out of character in the city. A total of 13 proposals have been passed to the commission since the council acted. New homes, those being remodeled and ones where a second story is proposed come under the "large houses" policy.

A tour of neighborhoods where the houses would be built is scheduled at 8 a.m. Once it is concluded, the commissioners will sit down at City Hall and vote on whether the houses look too large. The meeting is expected to start by 11 a.m.

The tour and special session had not been planned until last Friday, when inquiries by the Pine Cone showed that few officials knew how the policy from the council would be carried out. At a hastily called meeting Monday, the commission agreed it should begin the evaluations of the pending applications. Fewer than 20 persons attended the meeting and only one of 13 applicants was in the audience.

City Attorney George W. Brehmer told the commission that it had little power to reduce the size of any homes deemed too large. At issue is the appearance on pending construction, not whether the actual square footage exceeds legal limits.

Said Brehmer, "If you see features on the home that you feel are out of scale, you are not in a position to say the home is unacceptable. You don't have the legal authority to do that."

THE PLANS FOR THE 13 homes all conform to City Code specifications, according to Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham. Cunningham was directed by the City Council to isolate the applications and City Administrator Jack Collins was told to delay permits to build, remodel or add on second stories until he was authorized to do so.

Collins has defined a "large house" as "two stories, an addition to a second story or one which is close to the permitted maximum lot coverage or minimum setback requirements."

The Planning Commission, meeting on Monday, expressed discontent and confusion over the City Council directive. Two of its seven members, Dorothea Roberts and Eileen Thompson, were absent.

"This (home construction) has been happening for a long time. We suddenly and acutely face it now. I don't feel very comfortable about the way we're going about facing it," said Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson.

"All of us know you are in a very difficult position. There is no track record for this sort of thing," Brehmer replied.

The commissioners were confused about how to evaluate the homes. "Let's lay them (the plans) out on the board, cluster around and haggle," suggested Robert Stephenson, acting as commission chairman in the absence of Mrs. Roberts.

THE COMMISSION decided to approve one of the 13 projects. It unanimously determined that the new home proposed by Marshall Stimson on the southeast corner of Second and North Camino Real was not out of character.

Davidson then asked the city attorney what the commission should do if it determined a proposed house was too large.

Because the commission has no legal authority to deny construction, Brehmer suggested passing questionable items on to the City Council.

Davidson said he favored a moratorium as a "clear way" of regulating large construction. "Are we not then encouraging the City Council not to come up with a moratorium by considering the homes in this fashion?" he asked the city attorney.

"I wouldn't make any recommendation that you do anything to discourage the City Council. You must make your own judgment. If the homes don't hit you right in the face and you throw up your hands and say 'Oh, my God!'"

'It's just disgusting,' says thwarted builder

"It's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard," exclaimed Donna Chenoweth, a homeowner from Carmel. Her plans for a second-story addition to her house on Lobos, between Third and Fourth, have been stalled by the City Council directive that says the Planning Commission must review proposed "large house" construction and remodeling.

"I'm ready to sell off everything I own and say to heck with it," she said. "The whole thing is just disgusting."

Mrs. Chenoweth's application for a use permit will be reviewed Saturday morning, along with 11 others, at a special Planning Commission meeting scheduled at 11 a.m.

"This makes me a very disgruntled Carmel property owner. I'd even consider suing the whole outfit," Mrs. Chenoweth said of the city government.

Her proposal involves a $30,000 addition above her garage. "They have me running scared. I even called the city to see if I was allowed to prune an apple tree on my own property," she said.

But Steven A. Gann, a commercial photographer from Carmel, said some sort of "monitoring" of the larger homes is not unreasonable. "Somebody has to take a harder look at the large homes going in, but it must be done reasonably," he said.

At a March 6 City Council meeting, Gann protested a house under construction near his residence on Casanova between Ninth and Tenth. "The house is out of context with the surrounding neighborhood," he claimed. The home is being built for James Hopkins of Carmel by contractor Hewitt Clark. The 1,977 square-foot house is situated on a 6,600 square-foot lot. The house complies with existing lot coverage limitations.

Gann said he sympathizes with those who will be stalled by the new directive, "but we all live here for a reason. Whatever that reason is, it is strict controls that have kept Carmel this way," he said.

"Nobody is against two-story homes in Carmel. I'm just worried about those that are stretching the limitations and building homes out of Carmel's flavor," Gann said.

The photographer owns a cottage built in 1921. "I had to do all kinds of songs and dances to do work on my house, but nobody gave the time of day to the house on Casanova until the residents got upset," Gann said.

A Carmel resident and property owner who wants to build a new home at the north end of the city is upset at what he called "changing the rules in the middle of the game."

He preferred anonymity because he feared retaliation such as losing his use permit. "If I knew the rules in advance, I'd be glad to abide by them. But a change in the middle could result in a great financial loss for me," he said.

He indicated if construction is stalled until June, the labor costs alone could increase 10 per cent. Building a $100,000 home here could increase another $10,000 if construction is stalled three months, he estimated.

Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham suspects the waiting period for obtaining use permits on some homes could extend two months. Previously, it took about two weeks. "These people are upset this was enacted without any warning or previous comment," he said.

"I've been a building inspector for more than 13 years and I've never seen a directive like this. I don't know what they are trying to accomplish. But if this is what the residents of the city want, I'll enforce it," he vowed.

Health officer adamant in demand for Marriott sewage disposal plan

THE PROPOSED Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge development in Carmel Valley was scheduled to come before the Monterey County Planning Commission last night, with county officials and project opponents indicating before the meeting that sewage disposal may be the crucial issue that decides the fate of the project.

County Environmental Health Officer Walter Wong said Tuesday he would ask for a halt to any further consideration of the 376-room resort complex until the developers could present an acceptable method for disposal of the nearly 60,000 gallons of raw sewage the lodge would generate each day.

"This is unusual," Wong said of his request. "But we are asking for this in several other developments, too. There are a lot of (health) questions I can't really answer until I know what they plan to do."

Wong said he would submit the detailed plans from the developer, Winthrop-Carmel Inc., to the State Health Department for its comments and then come back to the planning commission with a recommendation.

"That would then be a part of the hearing process," he said.

PLANNING Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley said Tuesday the commissioners would have three alternatives in dealing with Wong's suggestion. They could accept it and continue the use permit hearings until a solution is offered to the sewage problem. They could elect to incorporate into the use permit a requirement that the developer find an acceptable sewage disposal method. The third alternative would be denial of the permit on the grounds that there is no acceptable sewage disposal method.

"This is certainly one of the keys on which the development hinges," Peters said.

Peters pointed out that the commission is reluctant to require detailed work, such as that required for a sewage disposal system, until it has granted a conditional use permit. He said the efforts are costly for the developer, who has no assurance of getting the use permit even if he does the planning.

Developers Nick Lombardo and Winthrop "Bud" Grice have suggested that the hotel either be tied into the Carmel Sanitary District or that independent waste treatment facilities be built and treated sewage — mixed with well water — be used to irrigate the existing Rancho NICK LOMBARDO, president of Rancho Canada Golf Club, fielded hostile questions before a Marriott site tour last week.

Canada golf course.

The sanitary district has imposed an annexation and connection ban, however, because the district sewage treatment facilities are functioning at near capacity. Use of the wastewater for golf course irrigation, while done elsewhere in the state, according to Lombardo, has not yet been approved for any Peninsula golf courses.

THE ALLIANCE — the newly formed coalition of Carmel and Carmel Valley groups opposed to the Marriott Lodge — had gathered an estimated 1,600 signatures Monday on a petition in opposition to the project. The group anticipated presenting some 2,000 signatures to the planning commission last night during the public hearing.

The opponents planned to focus their arguments against the hotel on four major issues:

- The sewage disposal problem.

- The question of water supply. Estimates vary on the amount of water which safely can be taken from the Carmel River aquifer. The Alliance wants more study of the matter before the hotel can be built.

- The question of Carmel Valley planning. The Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee is now working on a land use plan for the area and the Alliance wants the hotel project delayed until that plan is completed and approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

- The traffic issue. The original environmental impact report for the project envisioned an additional 4,000-plus automobile trips per day generated by the hotel and golf course. This has been revised down to 1,325. But opponents still believe congestion on Highway 1 going up Carmel Hill is severe and the hotel can only compound the problem.

The opponents also claim that Lombardo is on record in 1968 as saying he would not put a hotel on the property for at least 35 years. They also point out that the hotel is not in the Master Plan for the area adopted in February 1969. Lombardo has said the hotel was always considered an integral part of the golf course, citing "economic realities." He said the golf course itself was not earning a "fair rate of return."

But when asked at a public meeting last Thursday about the profit margin for Rancho Canada since it opened in 1970, Lombardo refused by saying, "I don't believe our financial situation is at issue here."

Asked immediately afterward what he considered to be a "fair rate of return," Lombardo replied by saying, "I doubt very much, sir, if you would invest your money in a golf course."

About 150 persons attended the meeting and toured the site in golf carts.

The developers contend that by locating the hotel on the westerly 25 acres of the 271-acre parcel, it will be partly concealed and consistent with existing development in Carmel Valley; that the hotel will generate 322 new jobs, 90 per cent of them filled by local people; and that the payroll and money spent by guests of the hotel will contribute more than $45 million to the local economy.

No action on the use permit application was expected last night, with a continuance to another planning commission meeting anticipated by Peters.

'We're blessed and lucky,' says wife of Sam Farr

"I really can feel that there's a cheering section out there pulling for me," Supervisor Sam Farr, seriously injured March 16 in an auto accident, told his wife after he regained full consciousness two days later. Farr, 36, was discharged Saturday from Community Hospital and said Monday he will attend the next Board of Supervisors meeting if his physician consents. "I'm in a lot of pain, but I'm a tough guy," Farr said. The meeting is scheduled on Tuesday in Salinas.

Surgeons removed Farr's spleen and his doctors continue to remove small amounts of blood that seep into his punctured lung. He suffered six broken ribs in the accident. Three were compound fractures. He also received some cuts and bruises on his head.

Farr's wife Shari said he can walk and strolls in the garden at their home in Carmel. She is seven months pregnant and they expect the baby around May 27.

"We feel blessed and lucky," she said on Monday.

Farr said he has received hundreds of letters and cards. "It is very humbling. You don't know how to say thanks to so many people," he said.

His physician, Dr. Benjamin T. Richards, will determine whether he can attend the supervisors' meeting next Tuesday. Farr said he intends to handle his supervisory duties from his home until he can start work at his office. He estimated it would be at least six weeks before he could resume his normal workload. In the meantime, Farr receives reports from William Peters, his appointee to the Monterey County Planning Commission, and from the aides at his office. He said constituents with inquiries or problems should contact his office aides.

There had been no tacit agreement among the five supervisors to delay business that affects his fifth supervisory district, he said. "You can't delay forever," said Farr.

Farr suffered his injuries when his foreign sedan collided with a cement truck in Seaside. Farr was wearing his seat belt. The driver of the truck was not injured.

Superintendent selection still several days off

Carmel Unified School District trustees expect to announce the hiring of a new superintendent at their April 11 meeting. They are completing background checks and contract negotiations with the finalist, whose name is not being disclosed.

Trustee Richard Wilsdon said Tuesday the board narrowed down an initial field of 195 candidates to the one individual but declined to name him until the investigations are complete. "We might turn up something we don't like or we might not agree on, a contract," he said.

Dr. Harris Taylor, superintendent for the past 12 years, will step down on June 30, but plans to continue teaching with the district for two more years before retiring.

'Large house' controversy

you'll have to pass them," Brehmer said. Some commissioners were reluctant to make their decision based on the rough plans for construction. Sandy Swain said the houses should be considered by the Design Review Committee, a Planning Commission subcommittee. Davidson suggested the entire commission should see the sites and determine if the homes are too large. Collins told the commission it did not receive clear directions from the City Council. "The commission has been asked by the City Council to define large. The city staff is reacting to constant pressure from applicants who feel they do not have large homes," Collins said.

AT THE MEETING, the commission voted to accept plans — then threw out the vote — on a home on Monte Verde, between 13th and Santa Lucia.

Collins stepped to the podium. "That particular home was, in our view, the largest house on the list. That should make the rest of your job easy," he said.

"We are in a learning process. Let's have another look at it," Stephenson said. "If we knew what we were doing, it would be a lot easier."

"I'd like to visit all the sites," Miss Swain said. The commission then voted to reconvene the meeting Saturday morning following the tour of the remaining 12 sites.

MID VALLEY SHOPPING CENTER

AN INVESTOR from Arizona has commissioned plans to build 220 condominiums and 200 single-family home sites on this 1,296-acre hillside parcel in Carmel Valley. Called Vista Nadura, the development, if completed as planned, would be one of the largest subdivisions in the Valley. (Michael Stang photo)

Vista Nadura Valley subdivision plan envisions 420 homes

A MAJOR new housing subdivision for Carmel Valley is on the drawing boards. Developers envision 420 homes and condominiums plus a riding center on 1,300 acres of land adjacent to Carmel Valley Manor.

A preliminary map for the proposed Vista Nadura development has been filed with the Monterey County Planning Department in Salinas. It is now going through environmental reviews and is set for a public hearing before the subdivision committee of the department today at 11:10 a.m.

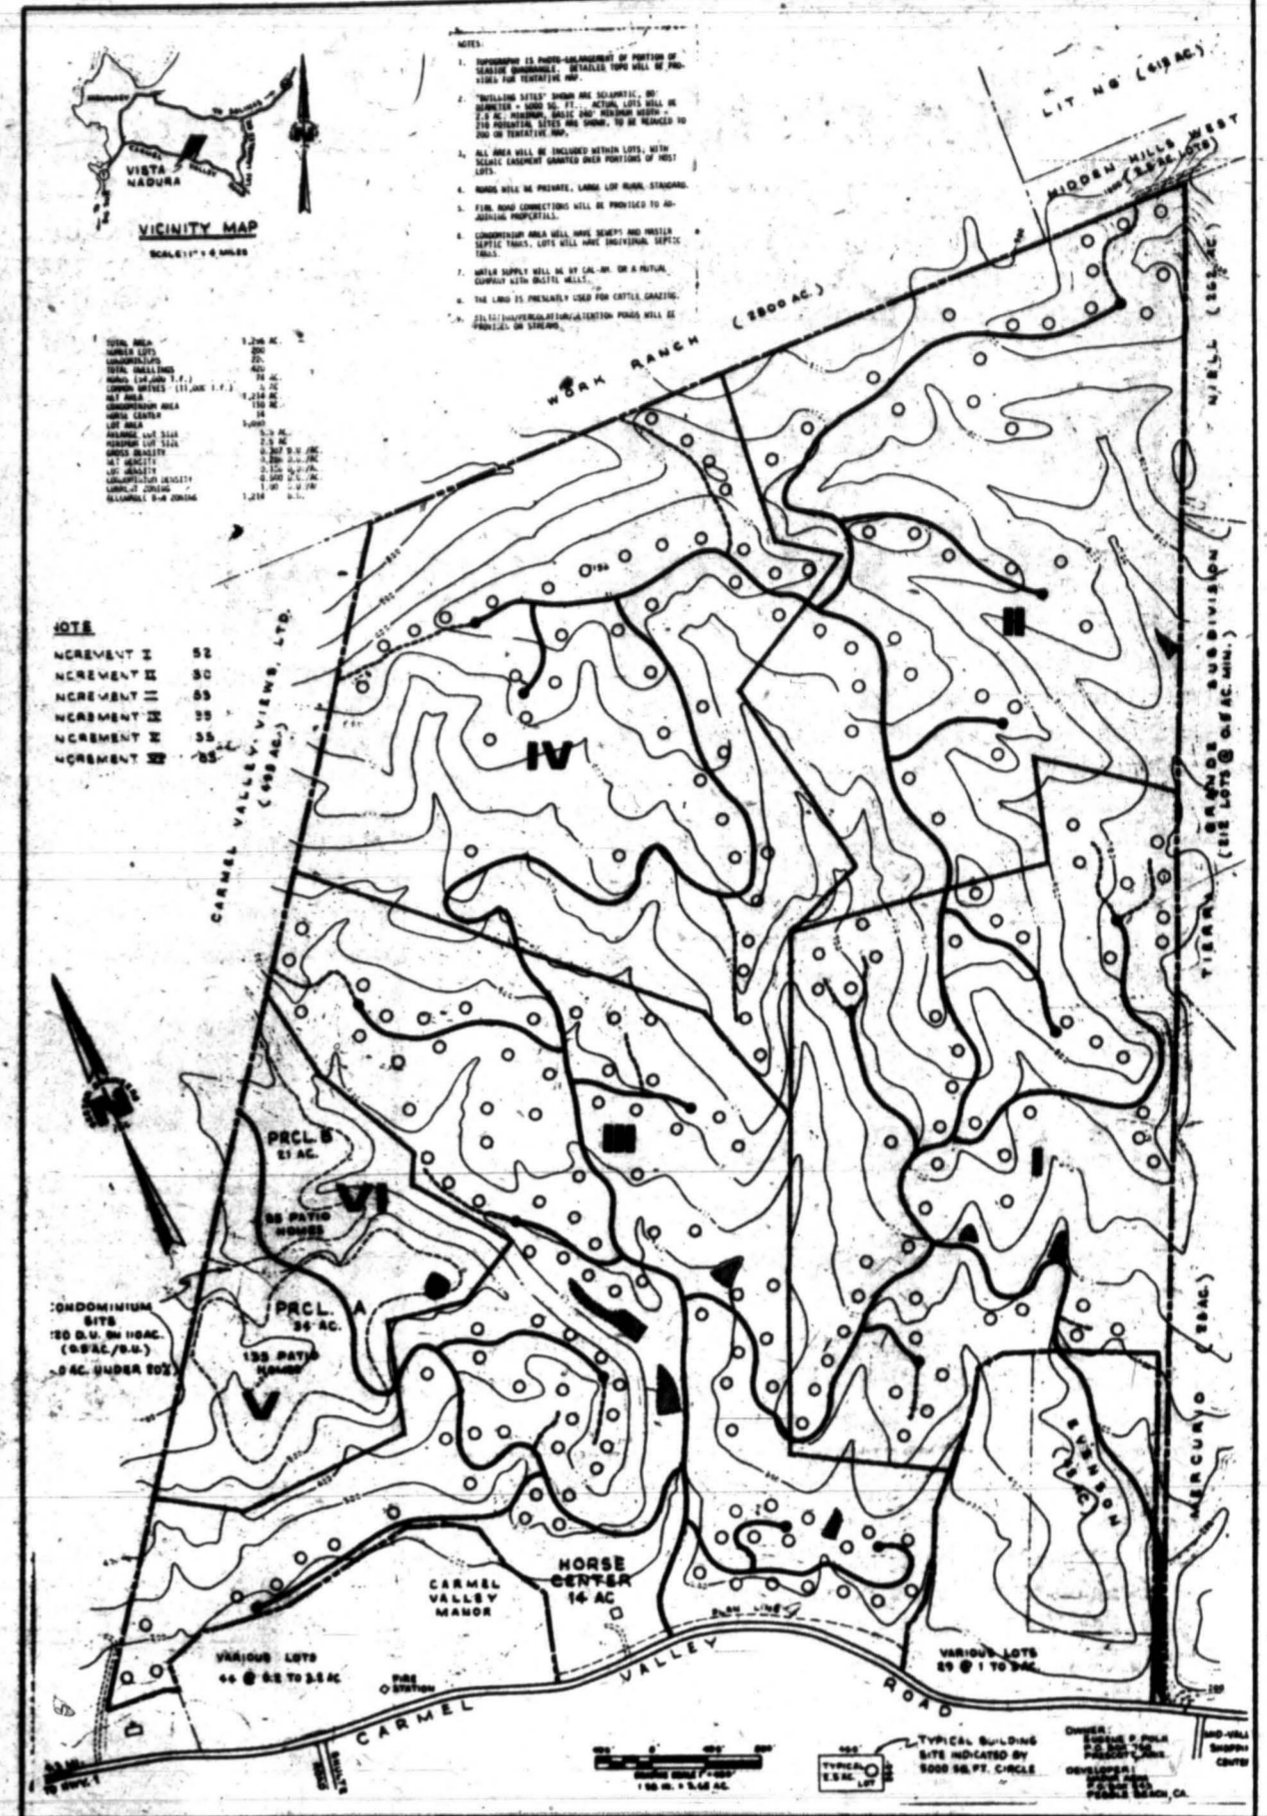

The project is the third largest development envisioned for the Valley area. The Point Lobos Ranch, with a resort inn, single-family homes and condominiums on a 1,698-acre parcel, and the Carmel Valley Ranch, with up to 500 homes, a 100-room lodge and golf course on 1,700 acres, are larger. The Point Lobos project is now going through environmental impact review.

Carmel Valley Ranch, which won approval for the overall development plan from the board of supervisors in January 1977, has already begun work on the tennis club on the property. It has permission to construct a golf course and clubhouse, also and has just submitted a preliminary map for construction of 150 condominiums on the property.

The developers will eventually turn over 1,200 acres of the land to the county for use as a park, part of the agreement which led to approval of the project.

THE VISTA Nadura proposal is for development on the old Doud Ranch, 1,296 acres of rolling hillside land fronting the south side of Carmel Valley Road, between Schulte Road and the Mid-Valley Shopping Center. The landowner is Eugene P. Polk of Prescott,

THIS PRELIMINARY map of the proposed Vista Nadura development in Carmel Valley shows 210 potential sites (the circles) for 200 homes, plus the location of 220 condominiums and a riding center on the former Doud Ranch. Roman numerals indicate increments as they will be developed. The dark lines are roads.

Ariz., and the developer is Nader Agha of Pebble Beach. Bestor Engineers Inc. of Monterey is doing the land planning and engineering for the project.

According to Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers, the development would consist of 220 condominium units on a 55-acre portion of the parcel, 200 single-family homesites and a 14-acre riding center at Carmel Valley Road where a corrugated metal barn now stands. The barn would remain.

Hooper said the developer would build the condominium units, but would not construct homes on the single-family lots. Roads and other improvements would be put in and the sites would be sold to individuals for custom units.

He added that the homesites would range up in size from 2.5 acres. The average lot size would be 5.5 acres, Hooper said. Zoning on the property calls for a one-acre minimum.

"So we could be putting in 1,100 homesites, allowing acreage for roads," Hooper said. "But we're not."

DWELLING unit density over the entire parcel would be 0.286 units per acre, according to Hooper. He added that scenic easements would be granted over portions of most lots.

He said the water supply would come from California-American Water Co. or through a mutual water system using wells that would have to be drilled on the property.

The condominiums would have sewers and master septic tanks, with the single-family homes responsible for providing their own septic disposal, Hooper said.

He said "very few" of the homesites would be visible from Carmel Valley Road because of the topography of the land. There are many small ridges and valleys on the property which would conceal homesites from view, he said.

The developer plans to add fire road connections through to the adjoining parcels and would provide roads and private drives for the homesites, Hooper said.

The development is planned in six incremental steps, with no definite timetable yet, Hooper said. The first four phases would be the construction of 52, 30, 83 and 35 homesites. The final two phases would be 135 and 85 condominium units, built after all the lots are sold.

ROSS JONES had to replace the inner tube in his front tire. Other more fortunate cyclists spent their time wolfing down doughnuts or window gawking along Ocean Avenue.

THE BICYCLISTS from Fresno pulled into Carmel for a 30-minute breather. They were en route to San Simeon. The van to the left follows the bikers and warns motorists about what is up ahead. (Michael Stang photos)

Not motorcycle outlaws

Angels of another sort invaded Ocean Avenue

It was Easter Week and, sure enough, the bikers showed up. Sixty of them converged on Ocean Avenue.

But they weren't Hell's Angels. They were high school students from Fresno on a bicycling outing sponsored by Campus Life, a Christian organization for youth.

For the youthful bikers, Carmel represented a 30-minute stopover on their 265-mile trip from the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco to Hearst Castle in San Simeon. When they pulled in on Monday of the last week, they had been on the road four days and had covered 160 miles.

They arrived in San Simeon on Sunday. Before departing Carmel, one bicyclist said the group would enjoy "steaks and showers" when they arrived. "But not necessarily in that order," he said with a grin.

Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF

Black rolls 3-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Last week's problem should have warned you that I wouldn't have posed this problem if I thought that it was right to hit the blot on the Black 10-point with the 3. The reasoning that applies is similar to last week's.

Holding two points deep in his opponent's home board, Black is in the perfect position to play a back game. The elements of a back game require the player to maintain a strong position in his home board and at least two points in his opponent's home board until such time as his opponent is forced to leave a blot.

Here, Black's timing is precarious. It is going to be touch and go whether he can retain his position until such time as White leaves a shot — if he is going to do that. However, one thing is certain: Black cannot afford to slow White down in any way whatsoever. On the contrary, Black must hope that White throws one or two large numbers while Black continues to roll low totals.

If Black hits the White blot on his 10-point, he is helping White's game. It is most unlikely that Black can succeed in extricating all the men trapped deep in White's home board — he needs too many right numbers. By putting a White man on the bar, Black will be slowing down his opponent, allowing White to retain his position that much longer. Even slowing White down by one roll could prove fatal, for it might force Black either to have to break his home board or to run with a man from White's 3-point.

Black should play the 1 by moving a man to his 12-point, then use the 3 to play the man from the 7-point to the 4-point. Black does not have to worry about leaving one or two blots. Indeed, the best thing that could happen to him would be for White to hit one or both blots. That would slow Black down and solidify his back game, giving him a fair chance to win the game.

Mozart opera to highlight Bach Festival this summer

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

A CONCERT performance of the Mozart opera, La Clemenza di Tito, Bach's mighty Mass in B minor and a 300th anniversary tribute to Vivaldi are the major program attractions of the upcoming Carmel Bach Festival in July. Maestro Sandor Salgo has revealed both programs and artists for the 41st Bach Festival which will be presented from July 17 through July 30. While the works of Mozart are a major cornerstone of the summer fare, it is still the great Bach who dominates the concerts and recitals.

Last year, we enjoyed a brief scene from Mozart's Titus (as it is called in English), which was the direct result of Maestro Salgo's production of the opera in the San Francisco area. His enthusiasm for the work has obviously not diminished, which is hardly surprising given the superb music with which it abounds. The festival production will be sung in English by a fine cast including Carol Vaness, Brenda Boozer, Cynthia Munzer, Pamela South and others.

Titus will constitute the Friday evening concerts.

The same soli and Raymond Gibbs, William Ramsey and Louis Lebherz will appear in the Mass in B minor for the Sunday afternoon concerts. The second playing of it will, of course, be the last event of the festival and in seeking an appropriate "last work," there can be hardly a better choice.

Other important Bach works of the Festival are the Cantatas, Nos. 31, 61, 106, 170, the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 3, 4 and the Concerto in D minor for Three Harpsichords.

The Mozart works other than Titus are the Piano Concerto No. 23 in A, K. 488, the Trio in E-flat, K. 498, Violin Sonata in A, K. 305 and the Flute Concerto in D, K. 314.

The Founders' Concert, at the Carmel Mission, will present the all-Vivaldi program, and the Vivaldi Gloria will be on the festival's opening night concert.

Other works of interest are Bach's Concerto in D minor for Two Violins, Violin Concerto in G minor by Tartini and Haydn's Symphony No. 88 in G.

Among the many solo singers and instrumentalists are Mary-Esther Nicola, Gregory Wait, David Abel, Christiane Edinger, Rosemary Waller, Douglas Davis, Gerhard Puchelt, Malcolm Hamilton, Louise Di Tullio, Raymond Duste and Edward Haug. The Bach Festival phone number is 624-1521.

Symphony program announced

MAESTRO HAYMO TAEUBER of the Monterey County Symphony has announced his programs and artists for the 1978-79 season which opens on Oct. 15.

Boris Bloch, the young piano wizard who created a sensation at MPC earlier this season, will be soloist in the first concert. He will play the Beethoven Emperor Concerto and the Liszt Hungarian Fantasia. The program also will include Beethoven's Egmont Overture and Boris Blacher's Concertante Music for Orchestra, composed in 1937.

Another young and sensational artist will be presented in the November concert. Violinist Joey Swendsen will play the Sibelius Violin Concerto in a program that includes the News of the Day Overture by Hindemith and Tchaikovsky's great Symphony No. 6, Pathétique.

In January, Ann Giles, principal flutist of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, will play the Mozart Flute Concerto in D, K. 314. The program will open with Stravinsky's delightful Pulcinella and will conclude with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3, Scotch, a wonderful score.

The February concert is being produced in collaboration with the Steinbeck Memorial group in Salinas. The program will open with the concert suite Aaron Copland extracted from the score he composed for the film, The Red Pony. (How could there be a more appropriate orchestra to play this work than the Monterey County Symphony?) Paulina Carter will then be soloist in Gershwin's marvelous Piano Concerto in F and the program's last piece is Dvorak's New World Symphony.

Leonard Pennario returns for the concert in early April. He will play the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 1 in D to open the program, which also includes Till Eulenspiegel by Richard Strauss and the second suite from Daphnis et Chloe by Ravel. The latter represents the first major piece of French music the orchestra will have played in many years.

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will join the orchestra for the May program, a concert version of Johann Strauss' Fledermaus. This season's lovely soprano, Gaelyne Gabora, has agreed to sing Rosalinda, but the other soloists are still to be announced.

The symphony's new season looks refreshing in its diversity of styles and variety of repertoire. This, coupled with the great success of its board in nearly eliminating the awesome deficit with which it began the season, bode very well for the future good health of our symphony.

HARTNELL COLLEGE in Salinas will be the proud host next spring of composer Alan Hovhaness who will be artist in residence during the week of March 19, 1979. Hovhaness has promised a new oratorio for the Hartnell music people, and there may be a first performance, in concert, of his opera, Pericles, Op. 283. The composer's wife, soprano Hinako Fujiwara, may be featured in the opera. Hovhaness is expected to conduct.

Classes offered at foundation

Two classes, Decorating with Fabrics and Vegetarian Cooking, are being offered at the Carmel Foundation at the Carmel Hall, Lincoln and 6th, Carmel. Both classes will be taught by Helaine Ark.

The fabric class, which includes instruction in sewing crafts for the home, creation vehicle and boat, meets Tuesday afternoons from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. The registration fee is $5. For more information, phone 4-1714 or 624-1588.

The vegetarian cooking class, which meets Wednesday evenings at Carmel Middle School on Carmel Valley Road, will introduce new concepts in cooking with vegetables, grains and tofu. Registration is $5.

Hunt Race Meet, Steeplechase Saturday at Pebble Beach

More than 100 equestrians are expected to compete in the 20th Annual Hunt Race Meet and Steeplechase Saturday, April 1, at the Bird Rock Course in Pebble Beach.

Spectators are welcome to watch the series of six races. There is no admission charge, but the $4 gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

The first two races — the Hill Topper Point-to-Point Race and the Del Monte Forest Point-to-Point — begin at noon. The Signal Hill race over a flat course for juniors (riders 17 or under) begins at 1:15 p.m. Then, at 2 p.m., the Bird Rock Steeplechase for women in hunting attire begins.

A crowd-pleaser is the fifth race, for shetland ponies and courageous riders, at 2:30 p.m. Volunteer riders are welcomed in the race, which requires that the rider "stay on" the obstinate ponies until they cross the finish line.

The final event of the day, at 3 p.m., is the Spyglass Hill gentlemen's steeplechase for the Del Monte Gold Cup. The race is over a timber course of three-and-one-half miles.

An alfresco luncheon catered by the Lodge at Pebble Beach will be served at noon in a special enclosure with an excellent view of the races. Proceeds of the luncheon will go to the United States Equestrian Team. Tickets, at $15, may be reserved by phone, 649-6346.

Steeplechase races vary in requirements for horses and riders, the courses to be ridden and whether fences (jumps) are included. There are also weight and age requirements with some horses required to carry lead weights to meet the limits.

Steeplechasing gets its name from the fact that riders used distant church steeples to mark their destination in early day cross-country races.

For additional information, phone the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, 624-2756. The maps of Del Monte Forest given out at all gates to Pebble Beach locate the Equestrian Center and the Bird Rock hunt course.

Ballet Fantasque

to perform

at Sunset Center

Mezzo soprano Linda Purdy will join Monterey's Ballet Fantasque for two performances at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Saturday and Sunday, April 1-2. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday.

Miss Purdy, who has appeared as a soloist with the Carmel Bach Festival and the Classic Guitar Festival, will sing a group of songs by the Spanish composer Manuel De Falla and Songs of the Auvergne by Joseph Cantelube. Presently associated with the Divas of the Golden West, a San Francisco-based touring company, Miss Purdy received her early training with the Goldovsky Opera Troupe in West Virginia and won first place in the 1976 Metropolitan Opera regional audition in San Francisco.

Polish-born dancer Jerzy Kozlowski will appear with the Ballet Fantasque. He has studied with the Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow and danced with Warsaw's Grande Theater, the Chicago Ballet and the Tucson Ballet.

The dance troupe will perform traditional pas de deux and ensemble works set by Kira Ivanovsky, the company's director, and contemporary solo and group dances choreographed by Ivanovsky and Kozlowski.

Tickets, at $4.50, are available at Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey; Lily Walker Records, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; the Monterey Peninsula College Community Services Office, 980 Fremont St., Monterey; the Julia Marlowe Box Office in Sunset Center; and at the door. Children's tickets, at $3, will be available for the Sunday performance only.

For more information, phone 375-1651.

'Of Mice and Men' auditions

this weekend at Forest Theater

Auditions for the Forest Theater Guild's summer 1978 production of Steinbeck's classic, Of Mice and Men, are scheduled Saturday and Sunday, April 1-2, 1-3 p.m. at the outdoor Forest Theater, Santa Rita and Mountain View, Carmel.

Of Mice and Men, directed by Cole Weston, will be staged Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings from June 29 to July 29 at the Forest Theater.

All roles (nine men, one of them black, and one woman) are open. No roles have been precast.

For more information, phone director Cole Weston, 624-8140 or 624-2764.

Wine importer suggests sensible wine pricing

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

A LETTER FROM a Seattle reader in response to our column on the possible collision course between price-escalated French wines and improved-quality California wines more fairly priced underscores our prophetic glance ahead. The writer is a wine importer.

A MORE SENSIBLE approach toward the distribution and marketing of fine wine is sorely needed. A personal case in point involved a delightful estate-bottled Muscadet which was priced with a European FOB which allowed the distributor and the retailer to take a fair markup and still offer the wine from first the 1975 and then the 1976 vintage at $2.99 per fifth at retail.

"This brand steadily increased in popularity, 500 cases of the '75 vintage moved through the market well, and 1,000 cases of the '76 vintage were ordered before the Easter frost (of 1977). After Easter, the FOB increased 40 per cent for both the 1976 and 1977 vintage.

"I was faced with a choice of raising my price and reducing my order (what the grower wanted, I expect) or killing the brand. I chose the latter, writing a kind letter to the grower explaining that as a distributor we must be responsible in bringing quality wine at fair prices to the consumer.

"Our company discontinued this wine despite some demand and increased our supplies of Italian and Spanish whites which filled the same need as the Muscadet. We will reorder when the pricing gets back in line.

"There is no region in the world that has a monopoly on fine wine, and when importers and distributors at a local level realize that men make markets, not labels, the consumer will be better served.

"I had dinner with a friend last night. On the (restaurant) wine list was a 1975 proprietary Pouilly-Fuisse at $13.50 and a 1976 Macon Lugny Pinot Chardonnay at $7. My friend was insistent that the Pouilly-Fuisse would be the better bottle. I bet him the price of the dinner that blind he would pick the Macon.

"Needless to say, the Pouilly-Fuisse was high in acidity and beginning to oxidize. The Macon was clean, well-balanced and straight forward with good Chardonnay character. My friend picked up the tab. This restaurant was not in my marketing area.

"If the restaurateur had a distributor that cared, the Pouilly-Fuisse would have been deleted from the list until the market stabilized. And the French wouldn't get away with this highway robbery.

"The 1975 Bordeaux offerings are already climbing, and if importers and distributors hold out the market will get back in line. I'm not holding my breath, and I guess we'll see a rerun of the '72 scene with overpriced '73s and '74s and out-of-sight '75s. The market should come tumbling down this fall unless the '78 vintage is a wipeout."

THIS PROFESSIONAL'S point of view confirms our prophecy. The far-out popularity of the white Burgundy called Pouilly-Fuisse has distorted its value; few on the market are worth the money asked. The same is true of its red wine cousin-in-demand, Pommard. If it's value you're seeking, skip Pommard. Substitute one of the finest and most certain bargains in the category of white Burgundies of Chardonnay lineage, the 1976 Louis Latour Macon Lugny. It is now, at retail, $6.99, even as our correspondent noted on a restaurant wine list. Replacement cost for that restaurateur would take the wine beyond $7. The '76 Burgundies are superb, and now is the time to lay down a supply at moderate prices.

For the red wine of Burgundy, the Pinot Noir lineage, instead of Pommard at an escalated price, two titles to look for are Savigny Les Beaune and Monthelie. Both are in the $7 to $8 range now.

For sure, wise winebibbers will find California wines for both special occasions and daily pouring which have the best value. As our correspondent said, wise buying will help the market "get back in line."

Kira Ivanovsky guides local ballet company

By RICHARD TYLER

Director, Sunset Cultural and Community Center

ON SATURDAY at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m., the Ballet Fantasque Company will present a divertissement at Sunset Theatre. The guiding light of this company, Kira Ivanovsky, has lived and taught on the Peninsula for the past 18 years. That a pair of pink ballet slippers can be a passport to international understanding and goodwill is proved by the life of Kira Lisanevich-Ivanovsky — born in old Russia, brought up in France, having danced and lived in England, India and China before coming to the United States in 1946 and to the Monterey Peninsula 10 years later.

Though she was born in Leningrad when it was still called Petrograd, Mme. Ivanovsky went to France as a small child with her parents. In addition to Russian, she learned to speak French at an early age and began dancing when she was 10, studying with Maria Nevelska in Nice and with Lubov Egorova in Paris. With Ballet Nemchinova, she toured Italy and with Ballet Kniaeff and Roman Jasinsky she toured France. As a member of the Ballet Russe, she toured France, Spain, Holland and England. It was in England, where she was with Max Reinhardt's production of The Miracle that she learned English. The other Russian-speaking member of the troupe was Boris Lisanevich of the Diaghileff Ballet to whom she was married in France. With him, she toured India, Malaya, Indonesia, Indochina and China and was guest artist of the Shanghai Light Opera and with the British Ballet in Calcutta.

While she conducted a ballet school, mostly for British children in India, she, herself, studied Hindu ethnic dancing.

After the war, Kira, with her small daughter Xenia, who was born in India, came from Calcutta to Savannah, Ga., by cargo ship, a journey that took 30 days. She brushed up on her ballet technique in New York, concertized for a while and then opened a ballet school in New London, Conn., where she did choreography for the Connecticut School of Music in conjunction with the Eastern Connecticut Symphony.

She closed the Connecticut school when her present husband, Donat Ivanovsky, decided to come to San Francisco. It was there that she conducted a dance studio with Emeline Van Dyke, one of her former pupils from Calcutta. A year later, when Ivanovsky joined the Army Language School in Monterey, Kira moved her mirrors, bar and ballet slippers to the Peninsula.

At the Ivanovsky School of Ballet in Monterey, she teaches classical ballet as well as "character" dancing. That is, national dances often used in ballet — mazurkas, tarantellas, czardases as well as the Indian dances she loves. She feels to learn all forms of dancing is very important because dancing has become a very expandable art with one form borrowing from the others.

Thinking back on her last production, she says, "It takes a lot of time, effort and money, then it's all over after the performance."

In 1974, the Ballet Fantasque Company was formed. Mme. Ivanovsky established it because so many dancers were coming to live here and wanted to continue their study as well as have an opportunity to dance publicly. There have been times when the company could not perform for no male dancer was available. However, as soon as one would appear or if they could get a guest artist, a performance was announced. Most of her students stay in the area only a short time having come here with the Navy or the Army; but some of them have had a great deal of training and continue study with Mme. Ivanovsky, making it possible to maintain a standard for the company. Some of the students have gone on to work with other companies; one student performs with the famed Joffrey Dancers.

OF RUSSIA, Mme. Ivanovsky said that, naturally, she is curious because she remembers nothing of the country she left as a small child and would some day like to see the place of her birth.

"People everywhere are wonderful, friendly and warm," she concludes with the philosophy of a cosmopolite who has lived on three continents, who is conversant with not only three national languages but a universal art form, that of the dance, an entree anywhere.

The Ballet Fantasque Company will perform divertissements at Sunset Theatre including a pas de deux from Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker; some new pieces to include Ondine choreographed by Mme. Ivanovsky; two Indian dances, authentic folk dances with which Mme. Ivanovsky is most familiar; and a scene from Berlioz' Romeo and Juliet. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and children under 12 are $3. They may be obtained at Julia Marlowe Tickets, Room #8A, at Sunset Center, 624-9446.

THERE IS A Schmeckfest, locally called a Food Festival, in Freeman, S.D., this next weekend.

THERE ALSO WILL be the annual Pegleg Liars Contest on April 1 in Borrego Springs. Pegleg came to Borrego Springs 48 years ago with a story about gold in the adjacent Santa Rosa mountains. Now liars come from as far as Texas and Alaska to tell tall tales about Pegleg. To enter, liars must add 10 rocks to the pile known as Pegleg's Monument.

Fire!

When it strikes, civilians turn frontline regulars

By KEN PETERSON

WHEN A FIRE alarm sounds in the Carmel area, there are 150 men and women ready to answer the call.

Two-thirds of them are volunteer firefighters, either unpaid or given only a small stipend, yet ready around the clock to leave home or work to do what one local fire chief calls "the most dangerous job in America."

Of the five volunteer departments on the Peninsula, four are in Carmel and Carmel Valley. They range from the Carmel Fire Department, which is older than the city itself, to the Mid-Valley Fire Department, organized just four years ago. The other local volunteer units are the Carmel Highlands and Carmel Valley Fire Departments.

The State Department of Forestry provides paid service from its Rio Road, Carmel Hill and Pebble Beach stations, accounting for 30 of the 50 paid firefighters in the area. The Carmel department has only eight full-time professionals; the three other departments have four each when they are at full strength.

Tax rates for the districts are relatively low, varying because of differences in assessed valuation or other revenue sources. The Carmel department is funded through the 50-cent city property tax. Carmel Valley district taxpayers pay a 73-cent tax; for Mid-Valley, the rate is $1 and it is $1.14 in Carmel Highlands.

"Without the volunteers, we'd need five times the budget we now have," said Chief Bill Sims of the Carmel Valley department, echoing sentiments expressed in the other departments.

VOLUNTEERS ALL must meet basic state training requirements: a 48-hour course, eight hours of first aid instruction and training in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation techniques. They must pass a probationary period that ranges from six months to a year before moving to full volunteer status. They also must pass written exams and a proficiency test.

After that, each department requires regular participation in weekly training sessions. Those who cannot devote the time usually drop out early. Many volunteers stay active for 20 years or more, however.

Age is no barrier. Volunteers range from the 70-plus years of Alex Gibson with the Carmel department to 18 years, the minimum legal age for a full-fledged volunteer firefighter.

The Carmel department also runs a high school auxiliary at Carmel High School. Student members have been as young as 15, according to Chief Robert A. Updike.

"Students can respond on calls," he said. "But they can't join in firefighting activities unless they are directly supervised by an officer."

Many students later take paramedic courses at Monterey Peninsula College, Updike said, using their experience with the department as a springboard to a job with an ambulance company or fire department.

First in a series

Each of the local departments has a different set of problems. In Carmel Highlands, the major difficulty is attracting volunteers, according to Chief Robert Meloney.

"We're a bedroom community," he said. "At 7 a.m., everybody leaves, even our volunteers."

The cost of housing there also makes it difficult for younger men to afford to live in

CARMEL VALLEY Fire Department volunteers check out equipment and procedures on one of their trucks under the lights at the post office. All volunteers in all departments are expected to be familiar with every aspect of firefighting and basic emergency medical care.

the area, thus he said, cutting into the ranks of potential volunteers.

But the nature of the community also helps the department overcome some obstacles.

"Our residents are very fire conscious," Meloney said, "so we don't have many fires."

"We have trouble finding people during the day if there's an alarm, but somehow we always manage to have enough people to do the job," he said.

Other pressures on Carmel Fire Department volunteers make it tougher for them to respond to calls, although the department has the largest volunteer contingent — about 40.

When the siren sounds in the flagstone firehouse at Sixth and San Carlos, from three to 24 volunteers respond, depending upon whether it is an ambulance call or a fire, according to Updike.

NOT ALL volunteers answer all calls they hear, though. There is a reason: money.

"A lot of employers will deduct their time on calls from their pay," Updike said. "If a guy is going to lose $10 every time there is a fire call, well..."

But, the chief said, other employers are willing to "absorb the loss. They more or less donate it to the city." These employers are rare, he added.

While the department has fluctuated in membership from as few as 20 to as many as 42 over the years, the corps has maintained itself for the past five years by adding about five members a year to offset attrition.

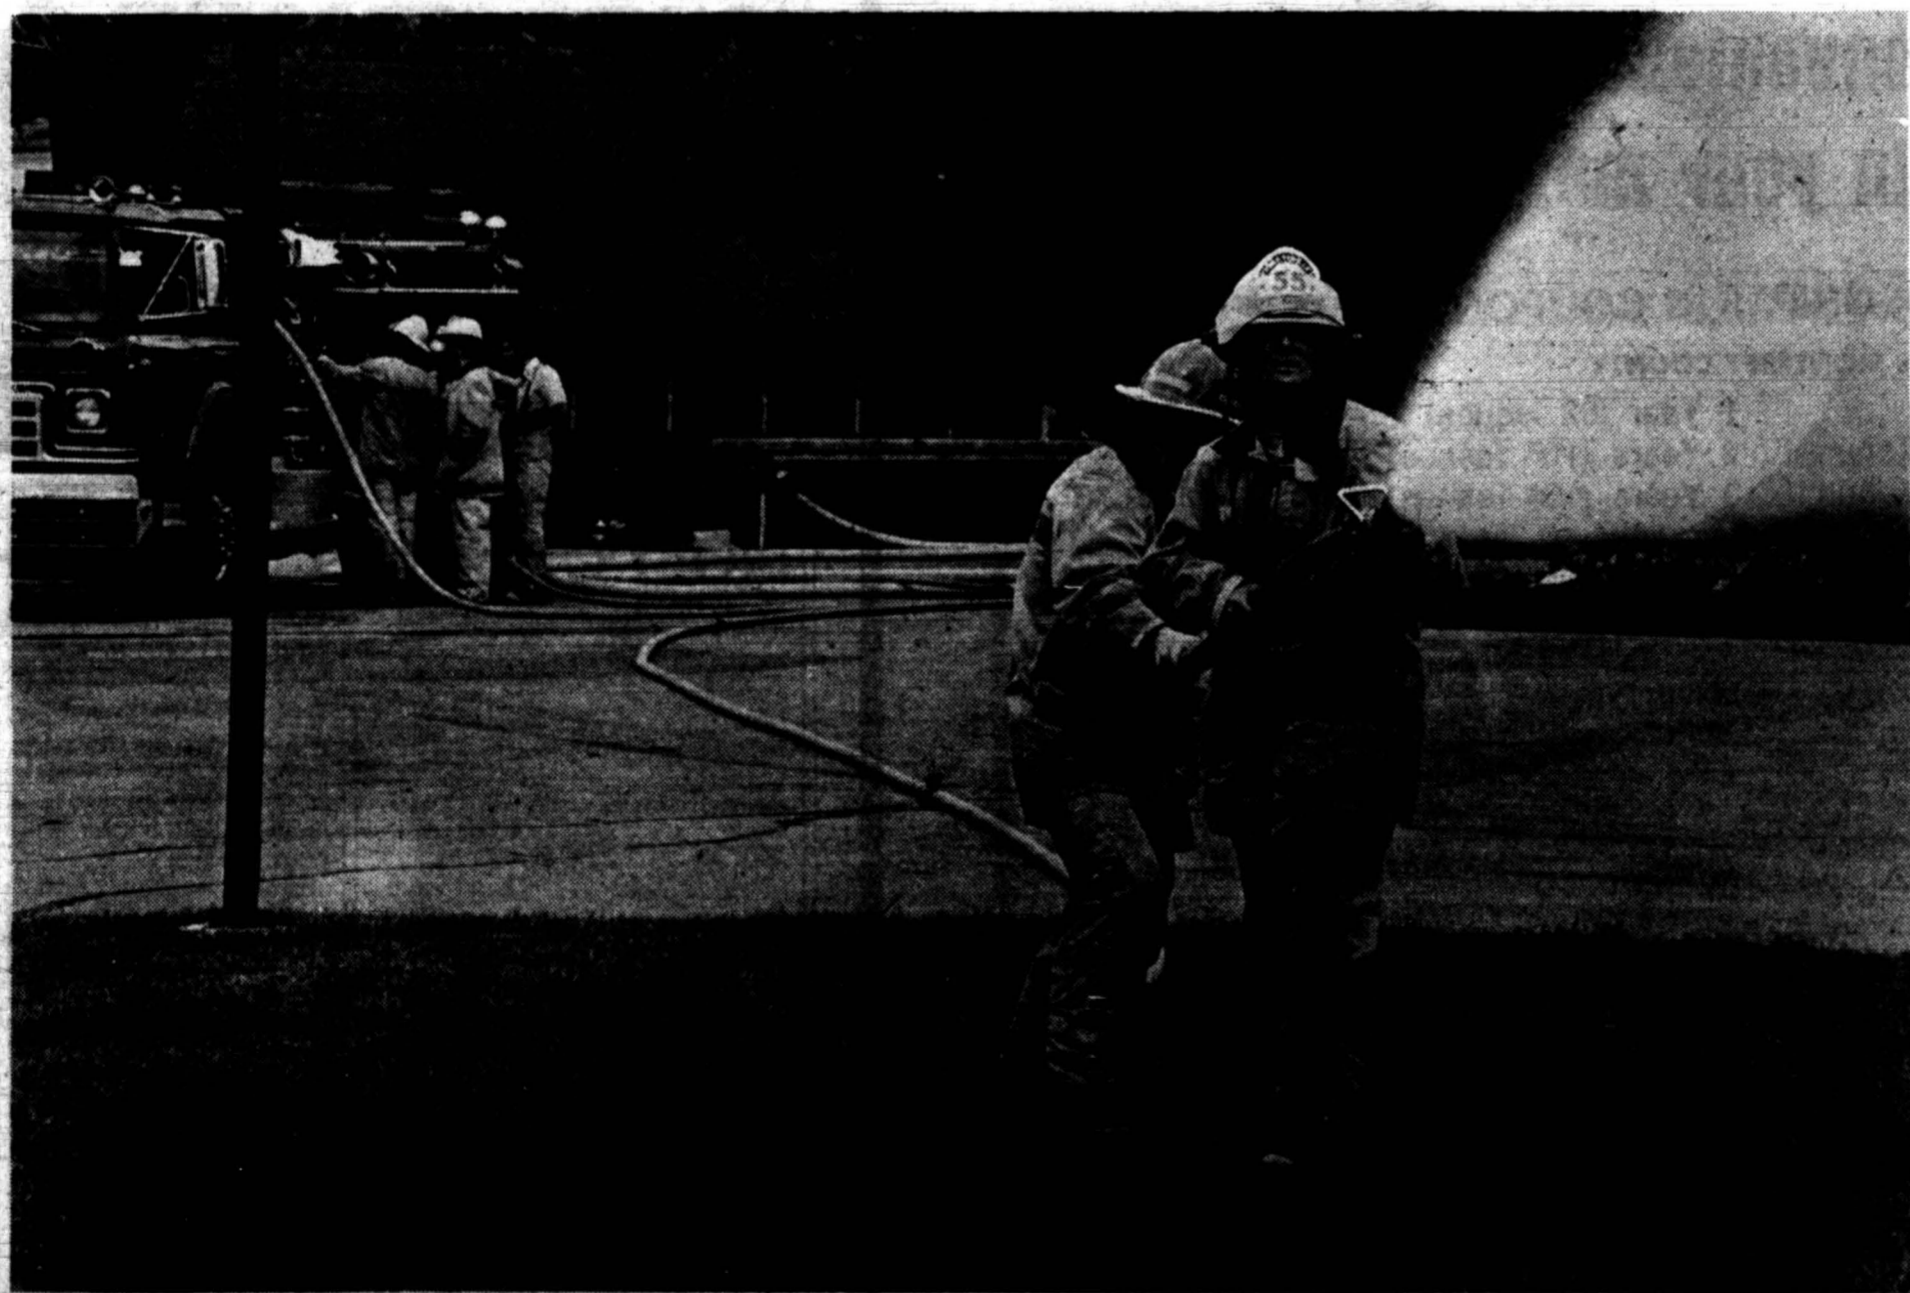

Compensation varies from department to department. Carmel volunteers get an hourly stipend for each call to which they respond. A portion is deducted for organization activities. Mid-Valley volunteers donate their annual pay — less than $2,000 — to the volunteer unit and it is spent as the group sees fit. In Carmel Highlands, pay is a "touchy subject," according to Meloney, one which he asked not to discuss. And in Carmel Valley, the volunteer club gets a $2,000 quarterly allowance from the fire district for maintenance of its clubhouse and to pay for insurance, club activities and other expenses.

The Mid-Valley department is the newest, organized over the past eight years by local residents who wanted both a quicker response time than the Forestry Department offered and more local control of the department.

Its redwood and glass stationhouse situated on Carmel Valley Road is modern inside and out. The one exception is Sparky, the Dalmatian, who snoozes on couches or fire engines and brings back visions of firehouses at the turn of the century.

The department enlisted women volunteers from the start and now has four in a 25-member contingent. The Carmel department added women in 1976 and now has four female firefighters. Carmel Valley

Confident about the future

Retired councilman admits it was 'day-to-day stuff'

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

AFTER EIGHT YEARS on the Carmel City Council, Bernard "Andy" Anderson can look at all the emotional issues he faced as a lawmaker and say, "It was just day-to-day stuff."

Anderson, 75, sometimes spoke so matter-of-factly at City Council meetings and seemed to simplify snarled rhetoric that you suspected the issue had no more importance than the milkman asking if you wanted one quart or two.

Any councilman is bound to be unpopular with some people, Anderson quickly learned. "Even if I was right 100 per cent of the time, some folks would have disliked me for that," he said.

But his overall popularity was attested to in a resolution of commendation the City Council unanimously awarded him at his last meeting, March 14.

Anderson yielded his seat to Howard Brunn, a founder of the Old Carmel residents' lobby. But he does not worry that the new City Council will drastically change the city.

"No matter what this City Council does, Carmel will always remain a thriving residential and business community, simply because of the natural assets we have here," he said.

He took a slow sip of coffee, then tugged at his cardigan sweater before commenting on his sometime political adversary, Mayor Gunnar Norberg. "I don't think anyone could be against many things he advocates, but I'm just not in favor of the way he goes at them."

Anderson, retired after 30 years with the U.S. Forestry Service, gazed at the fire crackling in the fireplace at his Carmel home. "Gunnar is very interested in Carmel. But we can't just isolate ourselves from the rest of the world. The people know we're here."

"I think the new City Council will do a good job of keeping Carmel from being invaded. But we just can't go back to having tree houses on Scenic Drive," Anderson said.

THE FORMER councilman reflected back over eight years, since his April 1970 election to the City Council. One of what he perceives to be his finest accomplishments in office is still pending. Carmel has never had a corporation or storage yard. But the city is "extremely close" to leasing a three-acre storage yard outside the city limits, he said. Anderson did most of the negotiating.

Public Works Superintendent Bill Askew has been forced to store city building materials in Forest Hill Park and at the Forest Theater. "Poor Askew has gone from pillar to post to find storage room," Anderson said.

Anderson went from pillar to post then back to the pillar again to obtain land for a library annex on Lincoln Street across from the Harrison Memorial Library.

The city never did obtain the land and Anderson admits that may have been one of his failures. "Maybe I should have screamed a lot louder for the acquisition of those lots," he said.

At his final City Council meeting, Anderson proposed a Planning Commission check on use permits for large homes under construction here. That proposal was a compromise but it stalled a moratorium on all residential construction, which had been proposed by the City Council majority.

"I'm skeptical about enacting a moratorium without a public hearing. That's a very dangerous administrative procedure. I figured this way at least the public will have a chance to say something," he said.

Still, Anderson's proposal has left behind it complaints from builders who claim the use permit delay could cost them thousands of dollars.

DURING HIS LAST 18 months on the City Council, Anderson repeatedly found himself on the short side of 3-2 votes. However, this minority role did not discourage him from seeking reelection. "After three years on the Forestry Commission and eight years on the City Council, I realized I'd given a lot of time. New blood is good," he explained.

"Maybe I haven't had too much success in the past year and a half, but at least I always stated my views," Anderson noted.

The former councilman holds firm to some generally unpopular views that stirred debate. He favors selling the Flanders mansion. He supports the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway that would run from Carpenter Street to Rio Road. "Something has got to be done. Right now all the traffic is shoveled through Carmel," he said.

The new R-4 designated residential zoning "could lead to a lawsuit that the city would lose," he remarked. "It will just cause needless confusion," he added.

The retired councilman said nothing can be done about the parking problem here. "The traffic and parking problem is unsolvable. This business of underground parking is someone's daydream. To do it would kill what Carmel is in the first place," he proposed.

The March 7 election that swept the Old Carmel ticket into office did not surprise Anderson. "That slogan about saving Carmel did it. Who could disagree with that? You might as well say you're against motherhood and apple pie,"

AT HIS FINAL Carmel City Council meeting, Bernard "Andy" Anderson received a resolution of commendation for his 10 years on the City Council and three years on the Forestry Commission. (Michael Stang photo)

Anderson stated.

The slogan naturally drew votes, he claimed. "But whoever was elected on that promise will find the same problems exist. I doubt if they can solve them any better than the last council."

Although he has completed his City Council term, his term as a Carmel resident will continue. He has lived here with his wife Ethel for 14 years.

Does the resident agree that Carmel is primarily a residential community? "We have a combination here of businesses and residences. They are not separable," he said.

Planners refuse permit for finished guest houses

Two guest houses were built without permits because of snafu in City Planning Department

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

MAY I ASK another question?" said Carmel Planning Commissioner Robert Stephenson.

"Most of the questions have had no relevance to the use permit anyway," replied building contractor Hewitt Clark. "Why stop now?"

Clark's sarcasm came after a heated debate March 22 between members of the Carmel Planning Commission. The commission was acting in its role as the Board of Adjustments and was considering Clark's request for use permits on two guest houses and a bar sink at a home presently under construction on Casanova Street, between Ninth and 10th Avenues. Both guest houses were built and the sink was installed last year without city permits.

After long deliberation, marked at times by emotional statements, the board voted to deny the requests for use permits. The vote was 5-2. Stephenson, Leslie Gross, Sandy Swain, Manfred Prescott and Dr. Donald Davidson were in the majority. Eileen Thompson and Dorothea Roberts, chairman of the Planning Commission, voted to grant the permits. The structures can stay, the commission ruled, but only under conditions it specified after the vote was taken.

Mrs. Roberts expressed embarrassment after the meeting was adjourned. When some commissioners became sarcastic and the questioning strayed from the issue, Clark said he wanted to withdraw his application, but at the urging of Mrs. Roberts, he decided to let the board vote. "I've never run such a meeting," Mrs. Roberts said after the meeting.

James Hopkins, owner of the house, said later that he would appeal the decision to the Carmel City Council.

At issue is the size of the house. It meets requirements in the City Code, but neighbors and some planning commissioners believe it would have been bigger and may have violated as many as 18 regulations if they had not complained about its size.

IN THE HEATED discussion, Davidson reversed his own decision as a member of the Land Use Committee of the Planning

Owner says he will appeal verdict to the City Council

Commission. The subcommittee had recommended approval of the use permits.

Davidson said he agreed with Stephenson who stated, "This city does not have the teeth to punish someone who has not followed the rules." Davidson said denial of the permits would deter other builders from avoiding the proper procedures to obtain city approval on construction.

Clark inadvertently broke the rules in December 1976, when his building permit was issued before the construction plans were received by the city, Stephenson said.

"There was an error on the part of the building department. What do you want me to do — crawl on my knees and beg forgiveness?" replied Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham.

Construction was delayed for about a year as Clark and Hopkins awaited for Carmel's exclusion from the State Coastal Act. They wanted to avoid obtaining a special permit from the coastal commission. Carmel was excluded late in 1977 and construction started.

In February, Hopkins was warned by the city to check 18 potential building code violations. Included among them was the need for use permits for the guest house and bar sink on the property. Hopkins

Restaurant gets conditional okay

CRAIG MCFARLAND, owner of the McFarland Center at Sixth and Mission, has received city permission to convert a clothing store at the center into a restaurant.

A use permit was granted by the Carmel Board of Adjustments on Wednesday, March 22, but on the condition that McFarland shows the restaurant would have adequate restroom facilities.

McFarland wants to convert the Jag clothing store into an 89-seat restaurant by September. McFarland originally was granted a restaurant permit for that location in September 1976, but he let the permit expire when he elected to open a clothing store there instead.

The board voted 5-1 to conditionally approve the permit. McFarland has 45 days to present completed plans for restroom facilities on the premises.

Commissioners Donald Davidson, Eileen Thompson, Sandy Swain, Manfred Prescott and Robert Stephenson voted for the permit. Commissioner Leslie Gross opposed the permit. Chairman Dorothea Roberts was absent when the vote was taken but was present during some of the discussion.

McFarland accused the city officials of forcing would-be restaurant operators to tolerate costly delays. Stephenson replied, "I don't think the city stops restaurants from making money in this town. It's the other 70 restaurants that make it difficult."

The board agreed that

McFarland had not submitted adequate restroom facility plans. The restrooms adjacent to the proposed restaurant are currently designated for use by Gibson's Ice Cream Parlor and restaurant patrons. Stephenson said he did not want two restaurants sharing the same restrooms.

McFarland told the board there are existing restrooms on the premises that could be designated for public use. "I have more toilets and sinks on these premises than any other 8,000-square-foot site in town," McFarland told the panel. He said the center has five toilets and four sinks.

AFTER THE meeting, McFarland said he has not named the proposed restaurant. The developer said he will comply with the board's request for complete restroom plans.

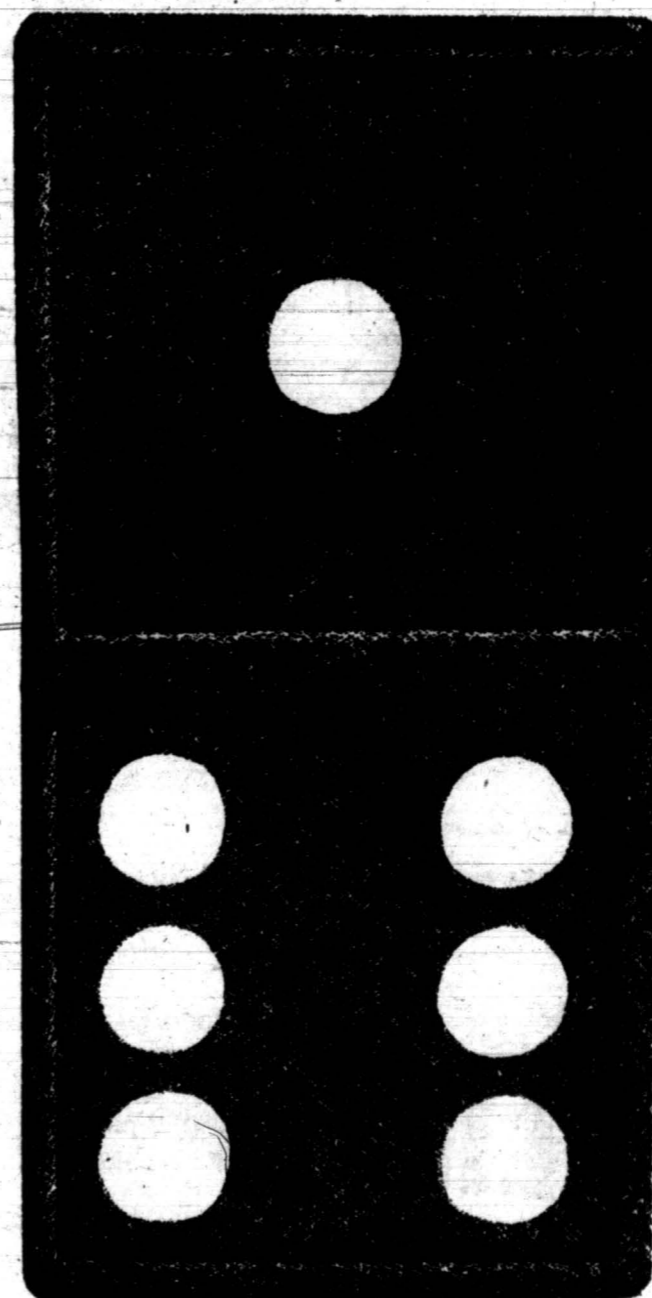

Stephenson argued against issuing the permit before proper restroom plans are received. He also asked that the board, not the City Hall staff, review the plans.

"It is obvious that the building department and city staff are not trusted. I suggest you issue the plans to Stephenson before a permit is issued," snapped Fred Cunningham, the chief building inspector.

Stephenson said, "Fine." Mrs. Roberts said, "You'd be changing the procedure we've used in the past."

"That is why we've gotten into trouble in the past," Stephenson replied.

NEW LIBRARY OPENS TO PUBLIC SATURDAY NIGHT

The formal opening of the new Harrison Memorial Library Saturday evening at 7 p.m. will be marked by a simple reception to the public by the library board.

The library was made possible through a trust provided in the will of Mrs. Ella Reid Harrison in memory of her husband, Judge Ralph Chandler Harrison, formerly of the State Supreme Court.

The gift consisted of 20 $1,000 bonds, which has since accumulated $4,000 interest; the land on which the library is located; a number of etchings and curios whose value is undetermined; and 2,000 volumes.

An architect of national prominence, Bernard R. Maybeck, designed the building. The library was constructed by M. J. Murphy, local contractor and builder.

They took the hell out of "hell week" this year. The hundreds of kids who usually invade Carmel during their spring break have mostly been behaving themselves, according to Police Chief Clyde Klaumann.

The few obstreperous individuals have been taken home by their parents on Klaumann's instructions. One 18-year-old, while on the carpet in the police station for drinking beer on Ocean Avenue, stole Sergeant Earl Wermuth's 60-cent cigar. Wermuth collared him shortly after the incident and he was charged with petty theft. Judge Ray Baugh fined the youth $25.

Battery of new tests prepared to identify failing students

FRESHMEN AT Carmel High School may find it a little more difficult to graduate than it used to be.

Public pressure and complaints that students are leaving California high schools without basic reading, writing and mathematics skills helped put Assembly Bill 65, commonly called the "Hart bill," into the lawbooks last year. It requires that all students meet minimum proficiency standards in the 3 Rs before receiving a diploma.

Parents, students, teachers and Carmel Unified School District officials have been working since September to put together a set of requirements for students here. The fruit of their labors will go to the district board of trustees for consideration on April 11.

If all goes as planned, the freshmen will be given their first proficiency test in May. Those who score 80 per cent or higher on the test between now and June 1981, will get a diploma if they meet other graduation requirements. Those who do not meet the minimum standard won't.

"That is for sure," said Paul Sheckler, assistant principal at Carmel High School and chairman of the steering committee putting together the proficiency requirements.

Whether the district might offer "alternative" diplomas for those who don't meet the basic requirements also must be decided, but Sheckler said the committee favors waiting for several legal issues to be resolved at the state level first.

Even so, Sheckler said he "would be very surprised if more than 10 per cent (of California students) do not receive a high school diploma." That is, he added, "If the schools are really doing the job of preparing students early and the test in each district is a sound one."

THE CARMEL PLAN would have students tested in graduation proficiency skills in the eighth, 10th and 11th grades. If at any point they pass the tests — scoring 70 per cent in mathematics, 80 per cent in writing and reading (70 per cent for eighth graders) — they are exempted from further proficiency exams. They can be retested, however, at the request of a parent.

The test questions are kept secret so students won't know what they will be asked. At least four different tests will be drawn up, so students won't take the same one twice.

And the exams are not simple. The mathematics test requires computing addition, subtraction, multiplication and division problems with whole numbers, decimals and fractions; computation of percentages; converting fractions, decimals and percentages; plus doing metric, time, volume and area computations; reading large numbers, graphs and charts; doing word problems; and solving consumer mathematics problems, including figuring wages based on hours and rates.

The reading portions of the test, all multiple choice, determine the ability of students to understand newspaper and magazine articles, fiction and nonfiction writing, and charts, maps and tables. It also is designed to show if they can use a library for pleasure and research.

The writing tests — different from many others around the state, Sheckler said, because they actually require a writing sample — measures basic grammar and spelling skills. It also requires students to write a coherent paragraph, fill out a job application blank, write a clear and concise business letter and address the envelope for the letter.

Sheckler said the writing requirement was included because "teachers said loudly and clearly they wanted it."

"Most districts won't require it because it is too difficult to evaluate," he said. "What is 'coherent?' And it is more expensive. We will have to hire test readers and make sure they are consistent."

Sheckler and the steering committee members believe that 60 to 80 per cent of eighth grade students could pass the proficiency tests when they were first examined. Field testing proved them to be correct.

According to Sheckler, 83 per cent of Middle School students tested in the sample reading and writing skills exams got passing scores. Among high school students, at least 76 per cent passed, ranging up to 97 per cent for some segments of the test.

Mathematics scores were lower for both groups. Only 45 per cent of 110 Middle School students tested scored above

Diplomas will be given only to those who pass the 70 per cent passing mark in one field test and 35.8 per cent passed among 67 students tested in a second trial.

For high school students, 78.1 per cent of 121 students passed in one test and 56 per cent of 57 students passed in a second trial.

A student who fails will be called in for a conference with a parent or guardian and a counselor and a teacher familiar with the student's progress. The conference is designed to review the test results and to suggest an instruction program to improve the student's performance.

"Repeated opportunities for instruction in the basic skills and for testing of them shall be offered the student who does not demonstrate mastery of basic skills," the Carmel policy reads.

Remedial programs at the high school level include the Learning Assistance Program, primarily directed at students with learning disabilities; an English-social studies class aimed at ninth graders below proficiency levels in reading and writing; consumer mathematics and, beginning next fall, participation in a learning center with intensive instruction in reading and writing skills for students with problems in those areas.

Continuation high school also is a possibility for students who cannot complete the regular program, Sheckler said.

In Middle School, offerings include Corrective Reading (grades six, seven, eight); the Learning Assistance Program; Remedial Math (grades six, seven, eight); Remedial Language Arts (grades six, seven, eight); Special Education in all basics; and a tutorial period in basic skills.

Sheckler said part of the state mandate is to provide basic skills training on a continual basis for students with problems. The monitoring is supposed to begin in kindergarten.

"We've always had cumulative records, test scores and teacher anecdotes about a student's progress," he said.

Hidden Valley benefit show planned April 12

The Friends of Hidden Valley will host its annual spring fashion show, "The Saks Affair," on Wednesday, April 12, from 7 to 9 p.m., at the Saks Fifth Avenue store in Del Monte Shopping Center in Monterey.

A buffet dinner featuring dishes prepared by members of the Friends of Hidden Valley, and including wine and champagne, will be served before the fashion show.

The public is invited. Tickets are $15 per person and can be reserved by phoning 659-3115. Proceeds benefit the scholarship fund for Hidden Valley music students.

The music of the Hidden Valley ensemble and the latest in spring fashions will revolve around the theme of New York, "The Big Apple."

JVs beaten in tourney

Carmel wins consolation; opens season Tuesday.

By JAY POSNER

AFTER BEING blasted 11-3 by Campbell High School of San Jose in the opening round of the Soquel-Capitola Invitational Tournament, the Carmel High Padres came back to win three straight games and by doing so, gained the consolation championship for the tournament. The championship was won by Mountain View High School as they defeated Buchser High School of Santa Clara, 1-0.

The Padres, trying to defend the championship they won a year ago, shook off their loss to Campbell and defeated Marelo, 17-0, North Salinas, 9-7, and Bellarmine, 8-3, to win the consolation title and raise their record to 7-6.

In the game Saturday against Bellarmine, pitcher Steve Sepersky, now 3-0, was staked to a 8-0 lead after five innings, but he tired and after giving up three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning, was replaced by Pat Kelly. Kelly retired the last two batters and the Padres had won a title game for the second year in a row over Bellarmine.

Last year, Carmel defeated the team from San Jose in the championship game of the same tournament. The Padres offensive attack was led by Neil Vandervort, Sepersky and John Frincke, all of whom had two hits. The two key hits for Carmel were delivered by John Lucido and Frincke. Lucido's hit was a two-out bases loaded double to drive in three runs in the second, and Frincke's was a two-run scoring single with two out in the third. Saturday's game was the fourth consecutive time that Carmel had played Bellarmine on the final day of the Soquel tournament.

FRIDAY AGAINST North Salinas, the Padres scored five runs in the first inning and held on for a 9-7 victory. Pete Roling's bases-loaded double was the big hit in the first inning for Carmel. Roling added another double later on, good for one RBI, and a total of four RBIs in the game.

Dave Carpenter (2-1) pitched the first 5½ innings against the Vikings and was the winning pitcher. He received relief help from John Lucido, who came in with the bases loaded and two outs in the top of the sixth inning. Lucido proceeded to strike out Juan Arrocena, who earlier had two hits in the game, and retired the side.

Thursday night against Marelo, Neil Vandervort and Pete Roling knocked in three runs apiece and Dave McKenzie and Steve Sepersky each had two RBIs as the Padres blasted Marelo, 17-0. Carmel scored two runs in the first, eight in the second and three more in the third to take a 13-0 lead after only three innings.

The Padres collected eight hits and took advantage of 11 bases on balls that were issued by Marelo pitchers. Three Carmel pitchers — starter John Lucido and relievers Pat Kelly and Seth Bernstein — combined to limit Marelo to only two hits. Lucido worked three innings while Kelly and Bernstein each pitched two innings in the Padre victory.

On Wednesday of last week against Campbell, the Padres got only two hits and committed nine errors in their 11-3 loss. Campbell got only three earned runs off

Padre pitchers Rick Brenneman, Pat Kelly, Steve Sepersky, Scott Thigpen and Seth Bernstein, but even those three would have been enough as the Padres could manage only two doubles, one by Dave Carpenter and the other by Neil Vandervort, who had five hits in nine at-bats last week.

CARMEL WILL take this week off before going to Hollister on Tuesday to open up the MTAL season. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

IN THE CARMEL Benchwarmers JV Tournament, the Padres were defeated by King City 11-6 on Monday of last week. Carmel had lost to Soquel the previous Saturday in the first round of the tournament, and those two losses eliminated them from further participation in the tournament.

The tourney was won by North Salinas as the Vikings defeated Soquel in the final game, 4-2. It was the second year in a row that North Salinas had beaten Soquel in the championship game.

Mills College president will visit Carmel Saturday

Barbara M. White, president of Mills College in Oakland, will visit Carmel Saturday to be the guest at a luncheon hosted for her by the Monterey Bay Area Mills Club.

A reception is scheduled at noon at La Playa Hotel, Eighth and Camino Real. Lunch will be served at 12:30 p.m., according to Ruth E. Gillard of Carmel. She is the chairman of the luncheon.

Mrs. Gillard said she expects some 70 Mills Club members and guests to attend the luncheon.

The first female president of the college in 30 years, Ms. White was named to her post in July 1976 after several years in government service.

A former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, she is the 10th president of Mills, the oldest liberal arts college for women in the West.

Ms. White was the first woman appointed a U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. She served as alternate U.S. Representative for Special Political Affairs, with the rank of Ambassador, and U.S. representative to the U.N. Trusteeship Council from 1973 until her appointment at Mills.

Before her U.N. assignment, Ms. White spent more than 20 years conducting U.S. overseas information and cultural programs as a career foreign service officer of the United States Information Agency (USIA). She served in Cairo, Rome, Turin, Santiago and Washington.

She rose through the ranks to become deputy director for Policy and Plans, the USIA's top career job, in 1970. In 1971, she was named career minister, the highest rank in the agency's career service.

She left government service for four years to serve as program secretary for international affairs on the national staff of the League of Women Voters.

Ms. White is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Mount Holyoke College, from which she also holds an honorary doctorate, and earned her master's degree in history from Harvard University.

She has won two of the highest awards for government service — the Career Service Award of the National Civil Service League in 1967, and the Rockefeller Public Service Award in 1972.

In addition to her duties at Mills, she is a director of the Bank of America, the American Council on Education, the American Council for the U.N. University, the United Nations Association and Women's Forum West.

Fire departments redouble effort to minimize hazards and Carmel Highlands are all-male units. Mid-Valley maintains perhaps the most vigorous training effort, with weekly fire and first aid drills, plus special Saturday sessions on pump, hose and ladder deployment.

"The training program will be better a year from now," said Engineer Dan Guice, one of four paid employees in the department. "A year from that it will be better still. We take it very seriously."

THE DEPARTMENT is working hard to avert tragedies like the one that claimed the life of a firefighter last summer. The department had just come under the direction of Chief Ron Zeise when a paid firefighter, Mark Worley, once a volunteer, was killed Sept. 13 fighting a condominium blaze. Sidney Pryor, one of the four female volunteers, was injured in the same blaze. She is still with the department, though not as a firefighter.

The department has redoubled its training efforts since then. It also is promoting a fund drive to build a permanent training facility. The facility would allow firefighters to get experience in hazardous situations with real smoke and flames.

"The need for a training facility really hit home after the (fatal) fire," said Guice. "Until you get in the heat and smoke, you don't know how you'll react."

Support for the training center is strong among local chiefs, who agree that it is difficult to keep professionals or volunteers sharp fighting a few fires a year. While the Carmel department answered 37 structure fire calls last year, other departments had as few as four.

"The only way to practice is in a controlled situation," said Sims. "You get the feeling of temperatures from 400 to 1,800 degrees and see how a fire reacts."

Meloney said firefighting is "one of the few professions where you have to learn by pretending."

A training facility would consist of fireproof concrete buildings which can be filled with combustibles to simulate different burn situations.

The Mid-Valley department already has raised $13,000 for the facility, which Guice said would cost about $200,000.

Meloney said his department used to get requests from people to have dilapidated old houses burned down by the department to save demolition costs. These burns served as training exercises for the firefighters.

"Now," he said, laughing, "they rent them for $150 a month and say they are 'full of old Carmel charm.'"

DESPITE THE voluntary nature of their work, the area firefighters display great dedication. Eight of the 21 Mid-Valley volunteers, for example, have completed Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) training which enables them to meet state requirements for ambulance attendants.

"When someone joins the volunteers, he's really committing himself, his wife and his family," Sims said. "I give them all the credit in the world."

"It's hard if you work all day, come home tired and know you've got a meeting to go to. It's time you can't be with your family. And then you can get a call at 1 a.m. or 2 a.m."

It's not all work for the volunteers, however. Social events like barbecues keep them together. Most departments have comfortable recreation areas at their firehouses with pool tables and other amenities like kitchens that give membership in a volunteer group something of a club feel. The Carmel Valley volunteer building is now doubling as the fire station while a new one is being built.

When there is work, it may not be a fire or ambulance call. All of the departments are a last resort for residents who need help with, say, a flooded basement or a roof blown off in a storm. The Carmel Valley department draws a line, though — cats in trees are the jurisdiction of the SPCA.

"A lot of the people have been here for a long time," said Meloney of the Highlands department. "They're old and when they have a problem and don't know what to do, they call us. And we come and help."

"We have a very exceptional relationship with our permanent residents."

Then, too, as Guice notes, "Who do you call at 2 a.m. except the fire department?" Next week: The volunteers — who they are and why they do it.

Local trio elected to YWCA board

Three women from the Carmel area were elected to the nine-member board of directors of the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula at the group's annual dinner March 18 at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

Elected to three-year terms were Eloise Ewing of Carmel Valley and Marjorie Robotti and Teri Stott, both of Carmel.

Mrs. Robotti also was named to the nominating committee as a representative of the board of directors.

President Mildred Lawson of Carmel presided at the dinner meeting and Dr. Iona Logie of Carmel, chairman of the YWCA finance committee, reported on the purchase of the YWCA house at 276 El Dorado in Monterey. The house will be used for some meetings and other association gatherings.

Upcoming fundraising events include a thrift sale on April 8 through April 15 at the Monterey Peninsula Voluntary Services Thrift shop in Seaside. Persons wishing to donate articles for the sale should phone 649-0834.

The YWCA also will sell tickets in connection with the Laguna Seca races. More details are due later.

Rep. Leon Panetta (D-Monterey) addressed the dinner crowd of more than 100 on the Equal Rights Amendment and the changing role of women. The Rev. Dwight Edwards of St. Mary's By-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove gave the invocation and benediction.

A CLOSE-UP shot was needed by Carmel filmmaker Robert Blaisdell in his upcoming documentary "Adventure in Ventana" and he got it. The film is about wildlife in the Ventana Wilderness, but a segment involved "tall tales" told around a campfire and the tiger was needed. He was shipped from Los Angeles for the scene.

Filmmaker to host beach party Saturday at river mouth

Ten years ago, Carmel filmmaker Robert Blaisdell quit his job with a director of educational films. "In fact," he said, "it was on April 1, 1968."

So to celebrate his anniversary as an independent producer, Blaisdell has said he will throw a party, free and open to the public, on Saturday on the beach at the mouth of the Carmel River. Refreshments and food will be provided by Blaisdell. The party starts at 2 p.m., he said.

Since quitting his job, Blaisdell has produced more than 35 films, most of them documentaries.

His film "Adventure in Ventana," completed in 1974, is scheduled to appear on television sometime later this year, Blaisdell said. The 90-minute documentary is about wildlife and animals in the Ventana Wilderness.

to point out the consequences and responsibilities of sexual activity," according to Janine Robinette of the Planned Parenthood staff.

A brief slide show of peer counseling in action will be shown and Michael Dean of Carmel, past president of Planned Parenthood, will comment on the work of Planned Parenthood International.

Helene Boughton of

Carmel Valley, president of the United Nations Association of Monterey County, will explain how the World Health Organization operates.

The meeting is free and open to the public. Donations are accepted and refreshments will be served.

Counseling demonstration next week

A demonstration of peer counseling for teenage pregnancy and venereal disease will be presented next week by Planned Parenthood as part of a program to control the problems at Carmel High School and other Peninsula schools.

The demonstration will feature one peer educator from each of the four Peninsula high schools. It is scheduled Thursday, April 6, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Monterey Library Community Room on Pacific at Madison.

Planned Parenthood is training peer educators who will "answer all questions truthfully and factually and

Wellesley Club hosts bargain book sale

To earn money for local scholarships, the Monterey Bay Wellesley Club will conduct its annual "Bargains in Books" sale Saturday and Sunday at the former USO building in Monterey.

Recipients of the 1978 scholarships include Robin Morris of Carmel, a junior majoring in science at Wellesley College, and Elizabeth Plank, also of Carmel, who will enter the college in September. Profits from the book sale go to the Barbara Bell Thompson Memorial Fund. Mrs. Thompson, a Carmel resident, died in 1974 and was a member of the local Wellesley club.

The sale begins at 9 a.m. on Saturday and closes at 5 p.m. The hours Sunday are from 9 to 11 a.m. The USO building, now occupied by the YWCA, is at 600 Camino El Estero in Monterey.

Included in the book offerings are collections about Antarctica and the Civil War. Books by local authors Sally Carrigher and Eleanor Cameron also will be on sale.

Song of Infinity, a radio drama performed by students enrolled in the Radio Theater Seminar sponsored by the Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula, will be broadcast Saturday at 9:30 a.m. on radio station KUSP-FM (88.9), Santa Cruz.

In the seminar, 11 area students learned techniques of radio broadcasting under the leadership of Scott MacClelland, who wrote and produced the drama. MacClelland is the classical music director of KWAV-FM, Monterey, a music writer for the Carmel Pine Cone and a member of the board of directors of the Monterey County Symphony.

Participating in the seminar will be students Betsy Browne, Ted Browne, Jeanette Crosby, Wally Clement, Steve Griffin, Jennifer Henson, Kenny Kipp, Michael McLain, Susan McLain, Todd Masters and Monica Poland, all fifth, sixth and seventh grade students from area schools.

The Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula is a 12th grade volunteer organization which provides an educational program for gifted, talented and highly motivated young people in kindergarten through the

Builder's brush with city

complied in all cases.

"I have spent a great deal of time and money to design and construct the residence under the natural environment of that site," Clark said, defending the house. "Let's let the house get finished and see if it is not superior to many constructed here in the last few years."

It is the two guest rooms, separate from the house and already built, that have riled the commissioners and neighbors.

Although the board denied the guest house and bar sink use permits, the owner does not have to remove the structures. Instead, the board directed Clark to connect the structures to the main house and to make them accessible only from the main house. The rooms may only be rented if rooming house permits are obtained from the city.

The City Code permits residential room rentals if rooming house permits are obtained from the city. But kitchens may not be installed in these units. "It is unfortunate that the home is built so that it will be ideal for two rentals, but it is legal," said Davidson.

"WE DO NOT want a motel in the neighborhood," a neighbor, David F. White, declared in a letter sent to the board. Lewis Heald, another neighbor, called the house "a great monster of a structure."

While the public hearing continued, Clark approached the podium and offered to withdraw the use permit applications. "I don't want a big hassle. If it can't go through easily, the owner has instructed me to withdraw," he said.

Mrs. Roberts urged him to let the commission vote. "We will go through with it," Clark finally said.

The contractor asked if anyone on the commission had anything good to say about the house. Mrs. Thompson said a commendable job was done to protect the nearby trees.

Stephenson then asked Clark for his state contractor's license number and inquired about the types of locks on the doors.

Stephenson then said, "May I ask another question?" and that prompted Clark to ridicule the commission for asking questions he believed were irrelevant. Stephenson never posed the follow-up question.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA ORDINANCE NO. 78-6 AN ORDINANCE INCREASING RATES FOR GARBAGE COLLECTION

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. That Section 908.1, RATES AND FEES, of Part VI of the Municipal Code, is hereby amended to read as shown in Exhibit "A" attached hereto.

Section 2. That this increase is granted subject to the Collector's initiating a once-a-year program whereby residents may deposit refuse in containers at each of four locations in Carmel-by-the-Sea, sites to be determined mutually between the City and the Collector, said program to be in effect for one week during each twelve-month period, at no additional charge.

Section 3. All Ordinances and Code Sections or parts thereof in conflict with this Ordinance are rescinded.

Section 4. If any part of this Ordinance is found invalid, the remaining parts shall remain valid.

Section 5. This Ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption, at which date the new rates shall take effect.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, California this 13th day of March, 1978, by the following roll call vote:

FREE WANT ADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL GET-ACQUAINTED OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

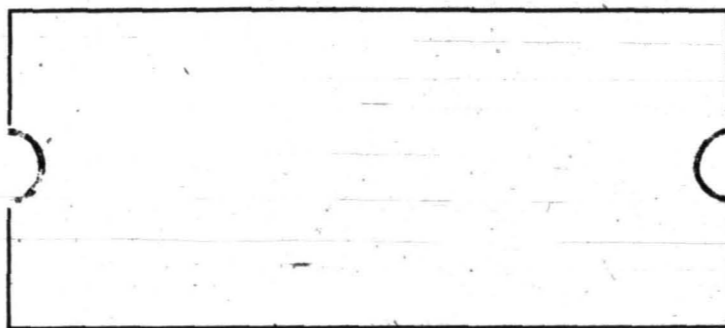

The Pine Cone is now under new ownership and new management. We are happy to be here and look forward to meeting our subscribers. Meanwhile, as a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a free want ad, every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by noon Tuesday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 20 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse to accept any free ad for any reason. Free ads may be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

ATTACH THE ADDRESS LABEL ON YOUR PERSONAL COPY OF THE PINE CONE HERE

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

DEL MESA CONDOMINIUM. Just listed, a beautiful two-bedroom, den, two-bathroom condominium in one of Carmel Valley's loveliest retirement communities. This has an excellent "B" floor plan, and is an end unit. The view from the living room, dining area and den is of the Carmel Valley, and is framed by the surrounding oaks and pines. The fireplace is marble and is recessed in a beautiful, paneled wall. The floor covering throughout is a soft celadon, wall-to-wall carpeting. Call us for an appointment. $120,000.

EXCITING CONTEMPORARY IN PETER'S GATE. Architect-designed and beautifully constructed with the finest of materials is this stunning redwood and Carmel stone home. Each of its four main rooms has its own outdoor area. Large glass areas allow the outdoors to flow into the rooms. Full-length glass doors make exit into these outdoor areas simple. Where confinement or privacy is necessary, translucent materials and overhead skylights are used to bring the natural light into the interiors. The living section includes a handsome Carmel stone and copper fireplace, lovely sun area, a dining area and a more intimate area for reading. The kitchen is a gourmet's delight with lots of counter work-space, all redwood cupboards and drawers, recessed lighting and a small but useful kitchen terrace for planting boxes and an herb garden. The master bedroom, with its enclosed lanai space, and dressing room bath, is generous in size. Hall steps lead to lower level that is one large room augmented by an outdoor space, a 12x20-foot terrace, a self-contained kitchen unit, and a bathroom, enabling it to serve as a separate apartment for guests or family. The masonry walls are all built of Carmel stone, and all the interior and exterior finish wood surfaces are redwood. This home was featured in House Beautiful and the San Francisco Chronicle. 3 BEDROOMS, DEN, 3 BATHS, OUTSTANDING VIEW & VALUE

A beautiful, architect-designed home on over an acre in exclusive Rancho Mar Monte. One of the best views in the Carmel area. Large rooms, den with fireplace, breakfast room, large dining area, extensive, easy-care landscaping. One bedroom and bath are quite separate from the other rooms. $298,000.

OUTSTANDING 2-BR. & DEN, NEAR TOWN & BEACH

This is a really beautiful, older home that has been remodeled and decorated under the supervision of Beth Danysh. The house is on 2 lots and the easy-care garden is particularly attractive. The price is $225,000, and we're as enthusiastic about the value offered as we are about the quality and feeling of the home.

2-BEDROOM CARMEL CONDOMINIUM

This is in the newest section of High Meadow, but it's far from a run-of-the-mill home. Great thought was given by the owner to make it as livable and as attractive as possible, and she had the appropriate modifications and decorating done to achieve her high standards. Shown with enthusiasm at $139,500.

CARMEL VALLEY GOLF & COUNTRY CLUB, 3 BDRMS., 2 BATHS, ONLY $169,500

This is perhaps the least expensive home in this very superior neighborhood. It is in excellent condition. It has a shake roof, oversized double garage, new quality carpeting throughout, wet bar in living room, BBQ in family room, separate dining room, and it's walking distance to the Carmel Valley Racquet Club. The address is 7015 Valley Greens Circle.

PEBBLE BEACH 2-BR. & DEN, $275,000

And this is the REAL Pebble Beach -- Venadero and Riata, a super location and a beautiful setting. This 15-year-old home has been so extensively remodeled and beautifully decorated that you might think it had just been built for the most fastidious owner. There are 3 baths, a huge kitchen that is almost 2 kitchens, a large dining room, protected patio, 2 fireplaces, BBQ in kitchen, and much, much more. It's an outstanding home for the money.

1 BEDROOM NEAR TOWN, $84,500

And it's south of Ocean Ave., too, not far from I. Magnins. It's a fairly typical, early Carmel Cottage, snuggled in the oaks at the rear of a Carmel lot. It can be improved, or it can be used as it is. It's small, but like any antique of value, size isn't everything.

Sunset House on Sunset Lane

Now and then (not often) a house comes along which combines functional design for living with great good taste. This is such a house.

We say that because this house divides at the entrance, with its private sleeping accommodations on the left and its waking hours functions on the right. Directly before you as you enter is its welcome to its guests: the spacious paved entrance hall with recessed chandelier, the formal dining room behind iron railing, and the sunken living room with one wall of stone embracing a raised hearth. Visible beyond is a spacious deck, Monterey pines, and the sea in the distance.

The sleeping area is just that: 3 bedrooms, 2 baths and multiple cabinets and closets off the hall. Walls are white except in the baths, which are attractively papered. The master bedroom is huge, 20 x 14½, and opens to a private deck. The master bath is superbly equipped, with gold fixtures and a bidet.

Most of the dramatics are reserved for the awake-time section at the right. You step first into the combination family room and kitchen, 22½ x 14½, gaily carpeted and brightly papered. It's divided by a butcher-block island (with a second sink!) which serves as preparation and service center. Behind it are walls of select walnut cabinets and a tiled counter with built-in double sinks, double ovens, range, dishwasher and disposal. At the opposite end, sliding doors open to the rear deck.

Beyond all that is the den, 18 x 14½, practically a second living room. Walls are walnut paneled, another rock wall surrounds another fireplace, there's a wet bar, bookshelves, a door to the deck, and a half-bath.

Still more — a large service area with laundry, walnut cabinets, space. All hardware is custom-designed, even to decorative switch and plug plates. Double garage, paved parking plaza, excellent landscaping.

The lot is a bit irregular, about 1/3 acre, and the sunsets are magnificent. Visit this home at 4068 Sunset Lane, near the Hill Gate in Pebble Beach. It's $159,500.

Hatton Fields English Country Home

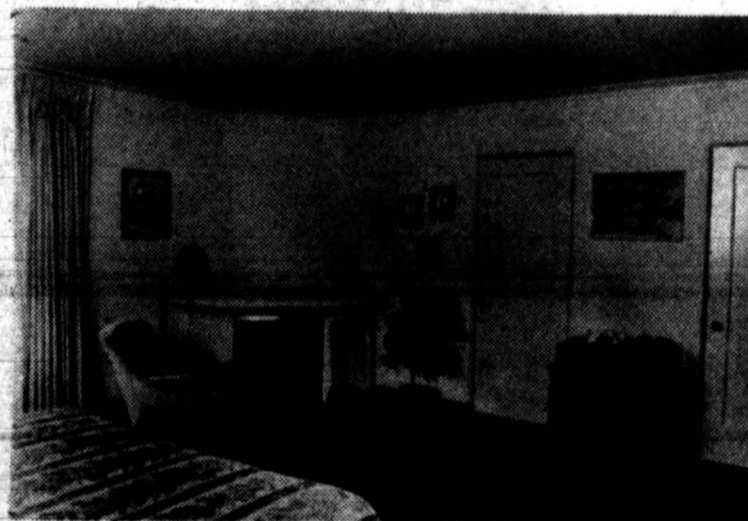

Built about a brick patio and secluded behind a high wall, this four-bedroom English country-style home on an acre site in the most prestigious part of Hatton Fields has all the fine features of Comstock design and construction.

Meticulously crafted paneling, moldings, ceiling beams and bookcases grace the handsome living room with high casement windows, random plank floors and mantled fireplace. Similar detailing enhances entry hall and adaptable garden room.

French doors open to a second, sunny brick patio off the gracious dining room separated by a butler's pantry from the kitchen beyond which is the large laundry/utility area with access to basement and double garage.

The master bedroom fireplace, as well as a big attic, ideal for children's rainy day play, add to the English country house feeling of this 3,000 square foot home with an artist's studio in the garden. Price, $365,000.

Proficiency test

"Now we have record keeping as close as can be to their exact levels of proficiency."

THE DISTRICT PROMOTES students from grade to grade, regardless of whether they have mastered the skills of the lower grade, Sheckler said.

"We're developing the total child, not just the 3 Rs," he said. "There's no point in having a child a foot taller than everyone else in the class."

Rather, Sheckler said, the district will offer "special programs for the kid along the way."

Early reactions to the tests show that "students are aware something is happening that will make them more accountable for their own achievement," Sheckler said.

At the same time, he said, it has "made us feel more responsible for developing basic skills programs. We are thinking seriously, especially about those students who might fall below our level of expectations."

Sheckler said the program will be costly to start up, with additional conferences, more record keeping and the need for test readers. And legal problems loom. Will there be discrimination lawsuits because the tests must be given in English? Can a student be denied a diploma based on a test?

Ultimately, the question is whether the students will be able to read, write and add when they leave school and if they will be able to function in society.

Said Sheckler: "If the student can demonstrate the proficiency we're asking for in these tests, we think the student can cope."

"I haven't thought about a monthly service charge since the day I opened my Grand Account for $1000."

Security Pacific Bank gave me a checking account free of a monthly service charge when I opened a Grand Account.

And, I get paid the Bank's legal maximum savings interest—up to 7½% annually in a Preferred Passbook Savings Account—after I select the maturity I want.

It's so easy and convenient to have my checking and savings accounts at Security Pacific Bank, I hardly even think about it. I guess that's why I like Security Pacific. I just don't have to think about banking anymore."

A Preferred Passbook Savings Account is a time deposit and Federal law requires the forfeiture of three months interest and the reduction of the interest rate to that of regular passbook savings on any funds withdrawn prior to maturity.

The bank you don't have to think about.
